Where Retro Boots Meet Live Rhythm – Gene's Country Club, Featured Venue of the Week

This week we visited Gene's Country Club in Pevely and found a genuine, old-school honky-tonk that puts live music and dancing first. Russo & Co headlined with a mostly country set and a few classic rock numbers, the medium-sized dance floor stayed busy, and the room's vintage booths and homey vibe made the night feel rooted in tradition.

Why Go?

Gene's is a family-run, dance-first venue that preserves a retro honky-tonk experience. Built by musician Gene Davis in 1976 and now operated by his son Randy, the club champions traditional country and rockabilly acts that groove hard for dancers

What to Expect

- Dance styles: Two-step, country swing, partner dancing, and line routines fit comfortably on the floor.
- Music: Bands focus on classic country and rockabilly from the 1940s–1960s with electric guitar, steel guitar, fiddle, and drums; Russo & Co leaned heavily on honky-tonk country with a few classic rock crowd-pleasers.

- Room: A medium-sized dance floor sits centered in front of a raised large stage; booths line the walls and tables provide extra seating. A half wall behind the floor separates it from the bar and additional seating.
 - Bars and payment: A small back bar serves beer, seltzers, and wine; the venue is cash-only for entry and drinks.
 - Practical: Open mainly Saturdays from 6:00 pm to midnight and for special events; typical cover is $10.

My favorite moment

Russo & Co surprised everyone with a seamless mashup that kept the line dancers uninterrupted – they stitched multiple songs together so the line routine never lost its beat, and the floor kept rolling without pause. I was part of that line for a few songs, and watching the room move as one while the band navigated transitions was a highlight of the night.

Insider tips

- Bring cash for entry and the bar
- Wear boots or smooth-soled shoes for spins and slides
- Either eat before you come or feel free to bring your own snacks; there is no kitchen.
- Expect to step outside to reach the restrooms via the wooden patio. Which is enclosed during the winter months.
