National Food Safety Education Month September 2022

National Food Safety Education Month is in September. It is a great awareness movement to educate oneself and others about food safety and about preventing food poisoning. Did you know that there are a lot more foodborne illnesses than you can think of? According to medical professionals, there are more than 250 foodborne diseases, all of which can be traced back to three categories of hazards: biological, chemical, and physical. This is a great time for you to read up on food safety and keep your house safe from deadly foodborne illnesses.

History of National Food Safety Education Month

You are what you eat. Poorly-prepared foods are prime hosts for bacteria, viruses, and parasites. Eating germ-infested food means increasing your risk of foodborne illnesses. Everyone is susceptible to foodborne illness and anyone who eats contaminated food can contract a foodborne illness. Eating contaminated food gives the illness direct access to the stomach. This is why some of us experience diarrhea, vomiting, and dehydration when we have foodborne illnesses.

Technically, germs are excellent at being everywhere all the time. So, when we prepare food, we need to be sure to wash our hands, the kitchen, the utensils as well as the food ingredients if possible. Bacteria and germs are not the only dangerous elements; food contaminated with heavy metals or with naturally occurring toxins can also cause longterm health problems, including cancer and neurological disorders.

If you're a homemaker, you can easily agree that a clean kitchen is a major line of defense between your family and the common cold, flu, food poisoning, and other foodrelated illnesses. Every household must ensure food safety, especially if there are children under five years old, pregnant women, adults over 65 years, or anyone with medical conditions. So, as consumers, we must be vigilant about food safety and be educated on how to handle food safely.

Mt. Tabor Lutheran Church will host Halloween in the "parking" lot!

Sunday, October 30, 2022 4:30 рм until 7:00 рм

Get your Halloween costumes ready and invite your family, friends, and neighbors to join us on Sunday, October 30, 2022 for trunk or treating, games, hot dogs, cake walks, and a bounce house.

Volunteers are needed for the following:

Host trunks along with a game* Bake/provide cakes for the cake walk Donate candy (lots of candy) Sign up to work at the bounce house

*Due to the fire, many of the games were destroyed. Therefore, please plan on bringing a game that can be played at your trunk.

Candy donations can be dropped off at the church office anytime before October 30, 2022.

To sign up please call or text: Tammv O'Quinn 803-315-6258 or Brennen Hutto 803-514-3690
