Non-Compete & Liability Disclaimer

Clients agree that Raise the Woof is not liable or responsible for any services, incidents, or outcomes that occur if a client independently engages with a pet sitter outside of the company's platform, roster, or scheduling system. This includes, but is not limited to, direct communication, booking, or payment arrangements made without the company's involvement.

By signing below, clients acknowledge that once services are requested outside of Raise the Woof, any associated risks, liabilities, or disputes rest solely between the client and the individual pet sitter.

Privacy & Client Information

We take your privacy seriously. Any personal details you share with us, including addresses, access codes, keys, alarm instructions, and household notes are kept confidential and used only for your scheduled/requested services. No photos or videos taken during your pet's visit will ever be saved, shared, or used for marketing without your permission; they are only intended to provide real-time updates to you. If you prefer that no media be taken at all, please discuss this during your meet&greet. If you would like to authorize photo use outside of updates, such as featuring your pet on our social media platforms, you may complete our Pet Photo Release Form.

If you prefer that your information, not be stored between bookings, you may complete a new information form each time.

Surveillance & In-Home Cameras (Florida Law Notice)

While we understand safety concerns when it comes to your home and your pets, we ask that all surveillance devices inside the home, such as nanny cams, security cameras, or smart home monitoring systems be disclosed prior to the start of service. Under Florida law, individuals have heightened privacy protections inside a private residence. Hidden or undisclosed cameras placed in areas where a person reasonably expects privacy may violate Florida's surveillance and video-voyeurism statutes.

To ensure compliance with state law and to maintain a transparent, respectful working environment, clients must inform us of:

- Any indoor cameras that will remain active during service
- Whether those devices record audio, video, or both
- Any rooms or areas where cameras are present

We reserve the right to decline service if undisclosed or inappropriate surveillance devices are discovered, or if audio-recording devices remain active without sitter consent.

I acknowledge that I have reviewed and understand the contents of all listed terms and conditions (pages 1-4).
