Log cabins were the first structures built in Wyoming.
The Riddle farmhouse built in 1834 still sits at the end of Wyoming Ave.
Jane Evatt and her family lived in a log home that predated this house.
Settler's choice of building sites were either dense woods or swamp.

Archibald Burns, Isaac Riddle & Alexander Pendery
all became partners in the Hamilton, Springfield & Carthage Turnpike Company, which built sections of the Toll Road, now called Springfiled Pike.

Edward Allen allowed a Civil War
Encampment of the 75th Regiment Ohio
Volunteer Infantry on his farm in 1861.
Camp McLean was named after US Supreme Court Justice John McLean.

J. Shepard
(Partial)

Alexander Pendery
arrived in the Wyoming area in 1806 with his wife and six daughters.
His father received this farmland as payment
for his service in the Revolutionary War.

The L'Hemmedieu
and Wilson farms
sold land to the railroads to lay
tracks and build a station.

The Mayhews farm
was later sold to the Hollmanns,
who operated the Compton Road Dairy,
and eventually sold its land to the Wyoming Golf Club.

* Small parcel owned by S L'Hemmedieu

WYOMING OHIO HISTORICAL SOCIETY
PRESERVATION • EDUCATION • APPRECIATION

The Original Farms of Wyoming ~1848~

the city of Wyoming est. 1874