Farewell

On Jan. 19, Millie O'Malley moved out of Brentwood, out of L.A., for good, and only a few close friends know where she went. "I'm just going to sneak away quietly. Let's just say I'm leaving Los Angeles for a country atmosphere," she said, adding, "Why would anyone want to get in touch with me?"

Well, perhaps because, after 40 years in the area, O'Malley was a familiar face to many. A Realtor and one of the only notaries public in Brentwood, she had also, for the last 10 years, managed the office building at 11973 San Vicente Blvd.

"She's a real bulwark of the neighborhood," said Brentwood resident Carol Perkins, "just a quiet person who's always been there."

"I'll miss Brentwood and all my friends and customers," O'Malley said. "But as you get older, it's nice to be nearer your family—least that's what my family keeps telling me."

Retirement, however, is far from her mind. Malley plans to continue working in real estate and to "play a little tennis now and then."
