

Robert (Bob) Herman has been practicing law in Carson City since 1980, with an emphasis on personal injury and medical malpractice cases. He has also handled cases involving defective products that caused injury, cases involving wrongful denial of insurance claims and litigation involving breach of contract, breach of the duties of trustees and other business disputes.

Mr. Herman was educated in the Carson City school system and graduated from Carson High School in 1966. After serving three years in the United States Army (1968 to 1971), Mr. Herman was honorably discharged as an Infantry First Lieutenant. Mr. Herman returned to the University of Nevada, Reno, and graduated with a degree in history and pre law.

Mr. Herman attended law school for three years at the University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law, graduating in 1977. Mr. Herman clerked for the Honorable Howard McKibben in the Ninth Judicial District and was then employed by the Nevada Attorney General's office for two years as legal counsel for the Nevada Real Estate Division. In 1980, he opened his law practice and has been engaged full time in that practice since primarily handling personal injury cases, medical malpractice cases, insurance bad faith cases and business litigation.

Mr. Herman was a member of the Nevada Trial Lawyers Association for many years and served on the Board of Directors of that organization. Mr. Herman also served as a member of the State Bar of Nevada's fee dispute committee and the Disciplinary Committee.

Mr. Herman lives in Carson City with his wife Bethany and daughter Chloe. He enjoys boating at Lake Tahoe, river rafting, and golfing.
