

Testimonials

Question: Does anyone else have a hard time cutting their child's nails with a sensory processing disorder?

7:28

  Sensory Processing Disorder Parent Support (SPD)
Kristen Ann Cozzi · 6d ·

 Anonymous member 562 · 5d
Yes!!!! When she was really little I did it in her sleep. Since then she just kind of peels them back as needed. She can't stand the feeling of fresh cut nails. She's 11 now so she... See more
Reply  2

We are just mastering our 15yr old sons fingernails but he still won't let us go anywhere near his toes 😞. Xxx
Reply

  · 5d
Yes, I do it but it takes a long time as he has to take breaks in between each nail cut.
Reply

 Anonymous member 717 · 5d
Definitely!!! With both my children 3 and 6 years old only my 6 year old has diagnosis of SPD but wow Its hard work.
Reply

  · 5d
My four year-old and I decided to Google, "What happens if I don't cut my nails?". The pictures of the long and overgrown nails were enough for her to agree to trimmin... See more
Reply

Testimonials

Reply

[Redacted] 5d

YES!!! Shes 7 and still fights it and doing it in her sleep doesnt help

Reply 2

[Redacted] 5d

Yes I do it when he falls asleep

Reply

[Redacted] 5d

Yep

Reply

[Redacted] 5d · Rising contributor

Mines getting better

Reply

[Redacted] 5d

Feet only are a struggle

Reply 1

[Redacted] 5d

No, I don't get the chance. They bite them

Write a comment...

Testimonials

 Sensory Processing Disorder Parent Support (SPD) · Kristen Ann Cozzi · 6d ·

  6d

No, I don't get the chance. They bite them down to the nubs

Reply

  6d

Yes! Honestly the only solution was when he decided he want to try to cut them himself. I was so hesitant. But I let him Try and it went well. He's been cutt... See more

Reply  4

View 2 replies

  6d ·  Top contributor

Yes! I have to offer sweet treats to get them clipped

Reply

  6d

My 7 year old fights this. Total avoidance and refusal. I put her under a weighted blanket and have her play with a fidget while doing it. That method seems to work.

Reply  1

 Anonymous member 340 · 6d

Have you tried do them while they are in the bath or just out of the bath as the nail is softer an sometimes doesn't feel as unpleasant for them or let them play in the water i... See more

Testimonials

7:28

 Sensory Processing Disorder Parent Support (SPD)
Kristen Ann Cozzi · 6d ·

  6d ·  Top contributor
My daughter has been cutting her own since she was 4. I had no idea she had started doing them herself. If i try, it's not gonna happen.
Reply  1

  6d
I did my best when they were sleeping.
Reply

 Anonymous member 749 · 6d
I have never cut nails or toe nails 1-he chews them off 2 he's fearful of the clippers
Reply  2

  6d
Yes! We still use the baby nail sander looking thing but it's not very effective now she's 3.5!
Reply

  6d
Yes
Reply

  6d ·  All-star contributor
Yes. He now lets me do it but, it comes with a lot of complaining. He started chewing his nails so, now, it is really just his toe nails.
Reply

Write a comment...

