

Louise Sugden

Here are a few other folks whose work I follow that do amazing craft. I often ponder about whether other people are just more talented than I am, or if they work harder, or if they see things differently, or if they've studied things of which I'm not aware... or maybe they are more like me than I care to admit to myself and that they are inquisitive and experimental... they do things that interest them and that they think is beautiful, or worthwhile, or intellectually or emotionally entertaining for a brief moment... and that their craft brings them joy, or hope that it brings others joy even for a moment... in contrast to what they may not enjoy seeing around them on a daily basis or in the news, and that by painting something with care and interest stimulates themselves and others to do better things and more of them in the world.

I hope you do too.
