

What to expect from an IEP Record Review

An IEP record review is a comprehensive, strengths-based analysis of your child's special education records, including IEPs, evaluations, and progress data. At NeuroRoots, we carefully examine how well services, goals, accommodations, and supports align with your child's unique learning profile and day-to-day needs. Families receive clear, easy-to-understand feedback and practical recommendations to feel confident, informed, and prepared for upcoming IEP meetings and next steps.

Comprehensive Record Analysis

We carefully review current and past IEPs, evaluations, progress reports, and related documents to understand your child's learning profile, strengths, and areas of need.

Alignment & Effectiveness Check

We examine whether goals, services, accommodations, and supports truly align with your child's needs — and whether they are working as intended.

Strengths, Gaps & Recommendations

You'll receive clear, easy-to-understand feedback identifying strengths, missed supports, and actionable recommendations for improvement.

Family-Friendly Guidance & Next Steps

We translate educational language into practical guidance so you feel confident, informed, and prepared for your next IEP meeting.

What a Record Review is NOT

A record review is not a legal opinion or independent educational evaluation (IEE). It is an educational analysis designed to help families better understand their child's program and options.
