Novels of the Great War

The photographs in this section were obtained from a number of sources. Most were from United States Marine Corps historical photos which were available by internet search. Many of these were found and posted to that location by Steve Girard. Others were obtained from US Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, historical archives and were furnished to me by André Sobocinski.

General James Harbord, USA, Commander, 4th Brigade of Marines
He wore a French Adrian helmet rather than the standard issue US
Army Brodie helmet.

Brigadier General Charles A. Doyen USMC

Doyen was relieved of his command of the 4th Brigade of Marines in early May, 1918 due to ill health. His removal and replacement with General Harbord was met with hostility by a number of marines who resented the replacement of a well-respected marine with an army officer who had no combat experience. Among those was Major Holland Smith, USMC, who was the Brigade Intelligence Officer.
