My thanks to you, my reader!

Please take a moment to give this book a “star rating” if you purchased it online. Online reviews and your word of mouth to friends are invaluable to every author, so please don’t be shy. If I got something wrong feel free to contact me through my website contact form. I’m not perfect.

My deep thanks to the people who helped me create this novel. They include my first reader, Sue Piechowski; Thank you, Sue. My critique group, Wordpardners, includes Rex Griffin, Scott Hibbard, and Mike Torreano. They are published authors; please consider checking out their novels. “Beta readers” are an important source of feedback to me. They include Ava Mott, Marilee Aufdenkamp, Spencer Millimen, Tom Mack, Emma Gluth, and Olivia Gluth. Thank you, all, for helping me make this a better novel!

Human editors and cover designers are key people in the publishing journey. The wonderful cover art was done by More Visual, Ltd. The map at the beginning of the book was done by Nat Case, of INCase, LLC. The interim copyedit of the novel was done by Aaron Redfern of Historical Editorial. Jenny Quinlan of the same company has been a constant cheerleader for my writing and did the final copyedit. Kelsey Klosterman helped shape the final version with a wonderful creative edit.

This novel is the product of my own human creation. Artificial intelligence played no part in the conception or creation of this novel aside from the spell check and grammar check functions in Microsoft Word.
