Tahiti, French Polynesia, May 19, 2021 – As millions of knowledge workers gain newfound ability to work from anywhere, Intercontinental Tahiti Resort & Spa has partnered with unique travel company, Working Without Borders (WWB), to host its first ever Co-Working Adventure in Tahiti. Set for July 31st- August 7th, the seven-night workcation provides globetrotting parents with a platform for co-working, collaboration, conversations, and cultural experiences. It also provides a safe framework of adventure for kids, keeping them active and engaged in this culturally rich slice of paradise in the South Pacific.

Working Without Borders (WWB) was founded by Sam Keller after moving his family to Tahiti in 2020. “After discovering all the joy and freedom that came along with it, we knew we had to look for ways to pay it forward, helping parents like us to live and work remotely in a beautiful location, among a community of like-minded families. Each family and situation are unique, and when it comes to our kids, we are all cautious, risk-averse. Thus, we started with a simple, doable idea. Design a pilot trip to Tahiti, a place we know and love, that would give parents of toddlers to teenagers a way to explore the reality and feasibility of remote working.”

For seven-nights, parents will get to work remotely in next-gen co-working spaces, alongside other tech, creative and entrepreneurial professionals, while the kids broaden their hearts, minds and horizons through phenomenal educational experiences for all ages such as: Learning to surf on a black sand beach with warm waves, stunning vistas, and expert instructors; Paddle boarding amidst sea turtles and eagle rays in the crystalline waters of the lagoon; Rowing traditional Polynesian outrigger canoes while spotting dolphins and colorful fish. Onsite daycare is also provided upon request for children ages 3+.

WWB's Co-Working Adventure at Intercontinental Tahiti Resort & Spa is available from $3,626 per family and includes:

- Accommodations for up to 2 adults and 1 child under 15 years of age (except overwater bungalows which allow for up to 2 children under 15 years of age).
- American breakfast daily for up to 2 adults and 1 child under 15 years of age
- A wide range of private and public co-working spaces with breathtaking views, inspiring design, abundant natural light, and fiber-optic internet.
