AUDIT SCOPE:

Pond-O-Gold Fannie Jones Field is a 65 acre farm that conventionally grows watermelons near Omega, Georgia. The watermelons are irrigated by an overhead pivot sprinkler system with water sourced from a pond located on the opposite side of a field to the northeast. There is cotton growing on the west side and south end of the field with a road running along the east side. The watermelons were planted on March 23, 2018. The field was used for growing cotton last season. There was one portable toilet on a trailer with a hand wash station in the field in a cleared area but there were no workers in the field at the time of the audit.
