BENEFITS OF BALLET

Physical

Ballet can improve body awareness and physical self-control. Ballet improves muscular strength and flexibility. Ballet training also boosts coordination and balance while correcting posture.

Emotional

Ballet can also help to improve children's mental and emotional health. Classical ballet instills a sense of pride and accomplishment which can boost self-esteem. As children improve and master more challenging movement combinations, they feel more self-assured, which can carry over into other areas of their lives.

Social

Ballet classes provide a social outlet for children. Attending classes regularly can help young children develop their social skills. Dance helps foster teamwork, communication, trust and cooperation. Ballet can also help children to forge new friendships, overcome shyness in social situations and reduce the fears associated with being in a group and performing in front of an audience.

Educational

Ballet training exposes students to a combination of movement, music and performance. Through that exposure, children enhance their sensory awareness, cognition which includes attention, memory and learning and overall consciousness. These are skills that benefit kids in all areas of life.
