"I Ought to Be in Pictures" Comedy By Neil Simon

Directed by Jay Desiderio

Reconnection Between Father and Daughter
Fuel Laughter and Tears at Desiderio's !

As always, Neil Simon finds a way to dig deep into humanity through his deceptively simple characters. Libby, a feisty teenaged girl who hitchhikes across America to "become a movie star," shows up at her father's California doorstep one morning and informs him that she plans to stay with him while settling down and pursuing her film career. The astonished Herb, who left his wife and children almost two decades ago, is suddenly confronted with his forgotten past. After some arm twisting from his new want-to-be boarder he decides to take another stab at fatherhood and hopefully this time, get it right. The two quickly have enough fights and screaming matches to make up for Herb's sixteen-year absence. Underneath the play's humorous and witty dialogue is a touching observation about humanity. It reflects the instinctive love that exists between a father and daughter and in Libby's case the undying need to reconnect.

WCBS-TV sees the play as: "A finely tuned theatrical blend of hilarity, honesty, directly and deeply felt emotion"

This Desiderio production features three of Buffalo's gifted actors, David Lundy as Herb, Reagan Zuber as Libby and Lisa Hince as Steffy.
