

SO MUCH FOR EVERYONE (or, my stolen title)

An emotional weathervane

Our secret to the true mundane

Hearts that are forever stained

With only myself to blame

Where was the harm in all of it

The deception and the selfish bit

Our two lives that couldn't fit

The late night tears the dark dark pit

The despair that I feel today

The emptiness I can't wash away

Missing you and all that you say

Your banter and your heart at play

You'd think I'd be better now

Come out a better person somehow

But in your pain and in your frown

There's so much shit that I allowed

Oh I told you a thing or two

I tore off a strip of you

It seemed like the thing to do

It cost me the last hint of you

It drove you away from me

And it tarnished our memory

There is no one who would ever see

What was once a you and me

So then so much for everyone

Who has seen me fall and seen me run

Who knows my grief has just begun

Because I know what I've really done

Feb 4 2019