Jeff Harman Biography

The Classical Astrologer

Jeff Harman is a second-generation astrologer with over 47 years experience. He utilizes Vedic, Classical, Kabbalistic, and Astro-Location Astrology. He is known for utilizing ancient, classical techniques which few astrologers today have mastered. Jeff has clients all over the world who consult with him for personal and business needs. He is based in Los Angeles, California.

Jeff Harman started learning astrology in the mid-1970s, when his mother, a nurse, impressed him with her astrological predictions about his girlfriends. Over the years, he did readings for people while working in other fields, simultaneously. Jeff owned a recording studio near Chicago, where he did commercial work, industrial films, music and soundtrack production. He also did forensic voice print and acoustical analysis in state and federal trials. He has worked with many celebrities in entertainment, business and politics. He was also contracted to do acoustic design and studio modifications. He recorded and worked with George Carlin and Mother Teresa of Calcutta, among other interesting people. He taught physics and produced commercials, songs, and music videos.

Eventually, in the late 1990s, astrology became his primary career. His scientific brain was well suited for crunching data and learning ancient techniques from rare texts, some of which have only been recently translated. After reverse engineering an ill-fated business deal, Jeff realized the value of offering his services to clients who wanted to reduce risk in business endeavors. He learned the Indian system of Vedic Astrology, becoming a master of compatibility analysis and remedial measures such as gemstone prescriptions, mantras and yantras. He included Kabbalistic Astrology and Astro-cartography into his toolbox. He mastered the art of Interrogation Astrology, which answers specific questions, and Electional Astrology, the art of selecting an auspicious date and time for an important event, such as a wedding, surgery, contract signing, product launch, travel date, or legal filing.

Your presentation--light, fun, informative, and stimulating, all rolled into one--was really well received. I know that you "woke up" many people and showed that astrology has much more to it than most people know or would even consider...your depth of knowledge is incredible--and your Power Point/film presentation was really compelling and very well put together and presented. It is amazing how we, in our western society have basically put "away" or put "down" such ancient knowledge, and how a struggle has developed between science and astrology...it doesn't serve any of us well, and I am very pleased that we could provide this audience with a perspective rarely available.

"He Consults the Stars for Business, Life Decisions"

Jeff Harman is an astrologer who recently moved his practice from Los Angeles to Tucson because L.A. was not a good astro-location. His clients are mostly in the entertainment business.

He consults the stars for business, life decisions

Timing is everything to Jeff Harman. Well, duh. What would you expect from an astrologer? Even our interview was changed to a more auspicious time.

But, hey, that's nothing. Harman also picked the exact time for his wedding, the exact time to conceive a child, and the exact time — OK, give or take a few hours — for that child to be born. "I went to the doctor and said, 'My husband is an astrologer,'" says Harman's wife, Camille. "The doctor said, 'Come on in at 11 a.m. tomorrow and we'll induce.'" Only in Los Angeles. And now Tucson. Last December, Harman, Camille and their son, Aidan, now 4, moved from Los Angeles and his Beverly Hills practice to Tucson.

The move was prompted by another of Harman's guiding forces: location, location, location.

Turns out L.A., where Camille had moved to from New Orleans in 1995, was not a good astro-location — something her husband confirmed by doing her astrological chart. So what would she do? Florida, her husband suggested. Too many hurricanes, said Camille.

Ah, but Tucson, it turns out, was just right for all three in the family. It's a creative town, says Harman, who's also worked up a chart on our fair city.

Using the date Tucson was founded, Aug. 20, 1775, Harman found the planets Saturn and Venus figure prominently.

"Tucson has a very powerful planet in Saturn," says Harman, explaining that Saturn is the central planet of knowledge and technology, while Venus stands for beauty, culture and artistry.

No word on whether potholes and traffic jams are also in our stars.

Skeptical about all this? No problem.

"I'm not out to convince anybody about this stuff," says Harman, an affable sort who turns 47 at the end of the month.

Besides, there are enough true believers out there to still keep him riding the jet stream between Tucson and L.A.

"Most of my clients are in the Real estate agents also use his dates. "They want to know when to buy and sell and when to execute a lease."

Then there's the location factor.

"There was a very successful jewelry company in New Orleans that wanted to set up a place in Atlanta. I told them it was not a good location. There was adverse energy. They went ahead and did it. They fed it for two years, then it folded."

Naturally, discretion is the word. "When we get a good time to sign the deal, we don't say we're using astrology. Everyone would think you're wacko."

Instead, he suggests the more common ruse: "My attorney wants to review the contract."

You could almost say he was born into the business.

"My mother was an astrologer," says Harman, who grew up in Wisconsin. By the time he was a teenager, his

When his mother died in 1988, he inherited her library filled with writings on the ancient systems of astrology, much of which Harman now

Meanwhile, he was teaching classes in physics and sound production in Chicago and doing sound-recording work in both Chicago and L.A.

In 1996, he moved full-time to Los Angeles, still doing studio work as well as astrology.

Two years later, he met Camille. Both were pumping gas at a Malibu service station.

He noticed her bumper sticker, the one that proclaimed: "I love England." He asked her what part.

"Wiltshire, where the crop circles are," says Camille. Of course. Even so, the stars must be served.

"He did a chart on our first date," says Camille. "If it hadn't been compatible, he would not have taken me out again."

Riding With The Stars On Your Side

by Jeff Harman

In the early 20th Century, Col. William Hall-Walker, founder of the Irish National Stud Farm, had an amazing success record for raising winning race-horses. He would note the birth time of each of his foals and cast their astrological charts. The foals with great astrological indicators, he kept and raced. Those with bad charts, he sold immediately, regardless of breeding or conformation.

Ronald Reagan and George Washington were two American horsemen who used astrology. Countless kings, emperors and members of elite society from history who were riders used astrologers because astrology has a lot to offer someone making strategic decisions.

High-level astrology involves much more than reading horoscopes. Like a weather report, it offers additional information on current conditions - information that would have been useful to merchants and kings alike. J.P. Morgan said, "Millionaires don't use astrology - billionaires do."

How does it work? Quantum physics reveals that very distant particles are connected and in communication. The exact mechanism of astrology is still unknown, but the system functions, nonetheless. Hermetic philosophy teaches, "As above, so below." One can also translate that as, "As goes the rider, so goes the horse."

An astrologer can help horse owners in many ways. Let's start with some basics. Astrologers look at planets, houses and signs. In astrology, horses are ruled by Saturn, Mars, and - for Arabians - include the Sun. Horses are also signified by the 12th house and by the signs Pisces and Sagittarius. These are the factors that would interest an astrologer when looking at charts regarding horses.

Saturn rules tradition, law, order, conservatism, hard work, karma and old age. Mars rules war, conflict, athleticism, military and police forces. The Sun rules ego, charisma and the self. This combination is why horses have long been associated with labor and war, as well as the ego or charisma of a person.

The 12th house rules horses, the subconscious, secrets and the paranormal. Horse mythology includes magic, travel to the stars, and casts the horse as a bridge between worlds.

Pisces, the twin fish, rules the emotions. It is associated with water. It is the most highly evolved sign and signifies a deep understanding to the highest powers in the cosmos.

Sagittarius, symbolized by the Centaur/archer, is the sign of animals, friendships and adventure. This sign is a factor in the analysis of horse and rider injuries. It represents the relationship of the rider to the horse.

A rider could certainly benefit by having a personal reading, which would reveal these factors strongly aspected and placed in their birth chart. Incidentally, these horse qualities are reflected in horse people. Many riders are traditionalists who are in military, police or legal professions and have a strong work ethic, love of order, friendship and adventure. And, as far as the ego is concerned, horse people are often obsessed with image, beauty and fashion, as well as skill. For thousands of years, riders have secretly enjoyed the ego boost they've received from being on horseback, decked out in all their finery.

Most horse owners do not know the time, date and place that their horse was born. If they do, then it is possible to cast a chart for that horse, in order to better understand its temperament, health and life cycles. This is what Col. Hall-Walker was doing at the Irish National Stud Farm.

For those who don't have that information, there are other ways an astrologer can help them minimize the risk of owning a horse.

Horse owners can use all the assurances available for success and safety. A good astrologer can help the horse owner to gather more information about a horse, to make good decisions and to time important events so that the astrology is favorable. There are two types of astrology that can be applied without knowing birth time information.

Horary Astrology is used when a client has a question burning in the consciousness. Upon hearing the question, the astrologer casts a chart then reads the answer by using a set of protocols. Horary is great for making decisions and getting more information about something. It can produce an astonishing level of detail about a situation. It can be used for finding lost objects, people or animals, or for finding out more about a situation that may be obscured in secrecy or deceit.

Examples of horary questions are, "Is it in my best interest to buy horse A or horse B?" or "What is the nature of my horse's medical condition?"

Electional Astrology is the art of electing an auspicious time to initiate something important, such as a wedding, business opening, large purchase or legal action. It dates back millennia to origins in Egypt, the Middle East and

The author used astrology to schedule his son's first day of lessons.

India. It was at its height in Europe in the 17th Century before slipping into obscurity in the 18th Century. Ronald Reagan was sworn in as governor of California at two minutes after midnight on January 2, 1967 in order to take advantage of good astrological energies.

Electional Astrology can be used to schedule the best time for buying or leasing a horse, horse property, or other large investments such as a trailer. It is also great for picking a time to walk out the door when traveling to a horse show. It can even be used, in conjunction with a vet, for selecting a good time for non-emergency surgery. Electional Astrology is great for incorporating or setting up a horse business such as a boarding or breeding facility.

Finally, Astro-Cartography can reveal a person's best geographic locations. This is very valuable information when investing in property.

Many people have heard of the "Law of Attraction" and believe that it will help them get what they want out of life. Working with an astrologer can help make positive thoughts work better than they would if one simply plunged ahead.

Used in combination with free will, hard work, and good planning, astrology offers people an edge for success in their personal and business lives and in their relationships with horses. □
