A Moment in Black History

By Patricia Means

ROSA PARKS DAY

On December 1, 1955, Rosa Parks made a decision that would have a permanent place in American history. While riding a bus in Montgomery, Alabama, she refused to give up her seat to a white man. This courageous act of defiance became a catalyst which inspired the local Black community to organize the Montgomery Bus Boycott.

The boycott was led by Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and lasted for more than a year. The protest persisted until the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that bus segregation was unconstitutional, marking a significant victory in the fight for civil rights.

As a result of her stand, Rosa Parks lost her job and endured harassment. However, she emerged as a nationally recognized symbol of dignity and strength in the struggle to end racial segregation.

December 1 of each year is commemorated as Rosa Parks Day to honor her legacy and contributions. The Transportation Department of Montgomery County, Maryland, is honoring Rosa Parks throughout this December by placing commemorative messages across its entire Ride On bus fleet.

Continuing the Fight

Recognizing that the battles for equality and dignity are far from over, numerous groups and organizations actively work to protect and advance the rights of the people. One Leisure World group is the “One Million Rising Alliance at Leisure World,” which is committed to defending democracy and resisting authoritarianism. Recently, the group participated and encouraged others in the “We Ain’t Buying It Campaign,” a nationwide pause in purchasing from Target, Amazon, and Home Depot from November 27 through December 1. This campaign aimed to protest these companies' complicity or complacency in enabling authoritarianism.

STANDING COMMITTEE ROUNDUP

Liaison and Amenities (L&A) Committee

Formerly known as the amenities committee, L&A wishes to assure members that friends and neighbors in the organization would like to share in their moments of joy as well as offer support and compassion during times of illness and bereavement. Contact Maxine Hooker, liaison and amenities chair, at mxnhooker129@gmail.com to offer information.

Shirley's Bench: The memorial dedication of "Shirley's Bench" was held on Sunday, November 9th at 3 pm in the Baltimore Room of Clubhouse I. This event was organized by Phyllis Pratt, a LWAAAC member and neighbor of Shirley. Phyllis collected over $800 from residents in her building, members of LWAAAC, and friends of Shirley. She purchased the bench from PPD and ordered a plaque. The bench was placed in the Edmonson Park on LW Blvd, near the Georgia Ave. gate on Monday, October 27th. Members of the family and friends of Shirley gave tributes at the program. Our own Ogbani Harambee Drumming and Percussion Ensemble performed as well as our own Rev. Glenda Clay. At the end of the program, some walked over to the Edmonson park and took photos.

GIANT Gift Cards: It's that time of the year for us to start collecting donations to purchase $50 Giant gift cards for those LW residents in need. This year will probably be a rough time for those who depend on SNAP and other food services. Any amount you can give will be greatly appreciated. Last year we donated over $3000 in $50 gift cards to the LW Social Services Dept.

Please place your checks made out to LWAAAC with "Giant" on the memo line and on the envelope, and place the envelope in the LWAAAC mail slot in the Lifestyle office in Clubhouse I. We would love to have all donations by December 12th. (Submitted to The Drumbeat by Juanita Sealy-Williams)

Itchy Feet Traveler Discovers Italia

By Mazel Pernell

To paraphrase 4th century philosopher and theologian St. Augustine “The world is a book, and those who do not travel read only a page.” The quote is widely believed to be a metaphor to underscore the importance of experiencing the world to broaden one's understanding of life and different cultures. In my adventures to 79 countries spanning all seven continents, I can say that I’ve read more than a few pages of the world.

My most recent adventure this fall took me to two countries - Italy and Vatican City. Yes, Vatican City, an enclave wholly within the city of Rome, is a country. Covering just over 100 acres with a population of fewer than 1,000 residents, Vatican City is the smallest country in the world.

My nearly month-long adventure began in Palermo, Sicily and continued north along western Italy. In Palermo, I was awed by the lavish decorations, frescoes, and grand altars in the city’s houses of worship. All were characterized by different architectural styles, due to a long history of additions, alterations, and restorations during periods of rule by Arab, Norman, Byzantine, Roman, and other barbarian invaders.

Vatican City is home to St. Peter’s Basilica, the Vatican Museum and the Sistine Chapel. My visit occurred during Jubilee 2025, a special holy year in the Catholic community. The Jubilee has been held once every 25 years since 1450 so that each generation can take part in at least one Holy Year. Saint Peter’s Basilica, the burial site of Saint Peter, the first Bishop of Rome, is the largest church in the world by interior measure

St. Peter’s High Altar, where the Pope alone celebrates Mass

St. Peter’s Basilica ornate Holy Door

Despite the Jubilee crowds, I was awe struck by the Vatican Museum's vast and priceless collection of artwork and humbled as I studied Michelangelo's biblical scenes painted on the walls and ceiling in the Sistine Chapel.

I felt privileged to walk through the ornate bronze Holy Door of St. Peter's Basilica open only during the Jubilee year when the faithful from all over the world are encouraged to pass through the door as a symbol of spiritual renewal and encountering God's mercy and hope. At the end of Jubilee on January 6, 2026, the door will be shut tight by Vatican workers and sealed from the inside with bricks, wood, and cement until the next Jubilee.

My Italian adventure ended in Venice, a city of 118 islands connected by 400 bridges and situated at 3.3 feet above sea level. The city has no roads, only canals. Trains, planes, trucks, cars, and buses deliver tourists and goods to the mainland, but getting to the island is only possible by water bus or water taxi. The Grand Canal, the major thoroughfare, and a network of smaller canals are used to transport everything, I mean everything, onto and off the island. I saw no motorized vehicles or bicycles on the island. Garbage boats are used to carry household, hotel, and restaurant waste to a processing facility on the mainland.

Venice's infamous Bridge of Sighs

Water taxis ferry people and all goods from and to the mainland

Houses along the canals remain afloat using complex engineering that begins with a strong foundation of wooden piles driven deep into the soft ground all the way down to a layer of hard clay and stone. But why, you might ask, would anyone build a city on water. In every city I visited, I heard stories about barbarian Germanic and Central Asian tribes invading Italian cities. Venice was no different. In fleeing those invaders during the 5th and 6th centuries, people from the Venice mainland sought refuge in the lagoons. While the lagoons provided the strategic advantage as a defensible fortress, the settlers had to learn to build new settlements on the water. Those lessons led to modern day Venice. In addition to the scenic canals, beautiful marble, stucco, and frescoed facades, Venice is home to historic sites such as St. Mark's Basilica and St. Mark's Square, the largest square in the city. Nestled along each of the narrow streets are stores and restaurants that contribute to the unique and magical environment that makes Venice so special.

On this tour, I visited 19 cities, walked 10,000 to 18,000 steps each day, visited archaeological parks with ancient amphitheaters in Siracusa, walked through restored Roman and Greek temples and ruins in Paestum, Segesta, and Agrigento, roamed through the ancient site of Pompeii dug out from beneath ash and pumice stone after the 79 AD eruption of Mt. Vesuvius, visited the hometown of St. Francis of Assisi, learned about the rich Italian history and culture, ate scrumptious multi-course meals with lots of pasta, drank delicious, delectable red wine, sometimes twice a day, enjoyed smooth silky decadently creamy gelato, sometimes twice a day, and so much more.

St. Augustine's quote suggests that the world is a source of knowledge and experience, and travel is the way to "read" and learn from it. During this trip, I learned a lot about Italy. And I can't wait to return.
