"The man" doesn't want us more than 2m near
Because within 2m, the whispers you'll hear
That it's past time, for us, to rebel against fear

Cover my mouth, I'll still speak my mind
I don't care for your lockdown, I'm not the stay home kind
Your dust masks and scarves can not save life
Some may fear Covid, I fear God.... and my wife
So, mutter in anguish as I do how I like
I wish I could tell you to go take a hike
You can call me selfish or say I'm taking the mick
But it's you spitting fear that's really making them sick
Feet up on your high horse, still complaining of course
About all the wine and the pizza, you ate just because Preaching lockdown rules and that "we're all in this" thing
While economies implode and children starving and dying
Crop failures abroad and locusts leaving Africa barren
Best you start growing food, we'll all be part of this famine
And if you're pro-lockdown, that's cool.. You have a right to your say
But so do I then and today is that day
I've heard the other opinions, the one's that avoid hearing mine
What difference can I make? I'm just getting started with this rhyme
Don't text 3 quid and say you're doing your bit
Teach boys to fish, to grow veggies, teach girls to love and to knit
Put focus on the family and the community will follow
Throw away the TV, that's making all of us hollow
Don't donate to a CEO on £500k a year
Ask the poor minded their troubles and help them conquer their fear
And understand it's not personal if the above gives you 'the bends'
It's Matt 10:34, the purpose of life is not to make friends
You say - 'Ah Ha! You hypocrite, I've got you now'
No luv, we're all hypocrites, stand in line, take a bow
This message isn't for the masses, the hope is just to reach a few
Every day is a new day and today you are new Offer your strengths in service, accept help with your weakness
And you'll drive out the forces, driving us towards bleakness
And if that's not your thing, you'd rather be a couch slug or lard
That's cool, just make sure...
Fear is not your only god
