

ALLWORLD PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Launched in 2010, AllWorld Project Management is investing heavily in technology and talent, and its growth is “directly correlated with our areas of investment,” said Anna Cardona, associate project manager. In addition to custom project management, the company works with clients in areas ranging from construction and engineering support to information technology and more. “We’re aiding our clients in project and program delivery by leveraging technology like Geographic Information Systems (GIS) and construction administration-related data collection tools,” Cardona said. “From digitally mapping Memphis’ sewer network to flying drones over Tiger Lane, our team continues to push creativity and innovation.” Its current staff of 49 employees represents a diverse group – and that’s intentional. “We are investing in the best and brightest talent from all regions of the world,” Cardona said. “This allows our clients to have access to a wide range of creative and innovative professionals.” Internally, the company is expanding its processes and protocols, and externally it’s expanding its partner and project base. And, stressed Cardona, AllWorld is not just flying drones. “We’ve had engineers and urban planners on awesome projects like Crosstown Concourse redevelopment and Big River Crossing, which was recently recognized as the Project of The Year by (Memphis Business Journal). Currently we’re assisting the City of Memphis with planning and redevelopment of the fairgrounds.”

Share This Post

Innovation. Growth. Jobs. These are key words when it comes to attracting and retaining talent in a metro area, and Memphis is on a roll. In 2017, Time magazine named Memphis among the top cities where Millennials are moving, and that's no small accolade when it comes to businesses and their bottom lines.

Each of the businesses on the Greater Memphis Chamber's "10 to Watch" list is growing, changing, evolving and keeping in step with tech advances and Memphis's own growth. From Tri-State Bank, which opened its newly renovated retail banking headquarters, to The Memphis Redbirds, which undertook a rebranding effort that taps into the grit and soul of the city, these exciting, innovative movers and shakers are both capitalizing on Memphis's needle-moving growth and contributing to it.
