

Chamber Announces 2015 Young Memphians

The Greater Memphis Chamber has selected its class of 2015 Young Memphians.

To qualify, the young professionals had to be chamber members under the age of 40. Nominations were received through the chamber's website, social media outlets and email.

"When we look at this talented group of young professionals, we see a generation that's ready to spark transformational change in Memphis," said Phil Trenary, president and CEO of the Greater Memphis Chamber. "These 10 young Memphians represent a variety of industries and companies, but they all have two things in common: a passion for Memphis and a hardworking, can-do attitude that will accomplish great things for our city."

The chamber's 10 Young Memphians are:

- Anna Cardona, designer and marketing director, Evans Taylor Foster Childress
- Airika Gigas, director of sales and events, LEO Events
- Noah Glenn, videographer, City Leadership
- Brent Hooks, accountant, Allworld Project Management
- Brooke Jones, engineer, FedEx
- Kela Jones, director of development, Peer Power Foundation
- Jonathan Lyons, director of public relations, Memphis Convention & Visitors Bureau
- George Monger, vice president and executive director, The Consortium MMT
- Carlissa Shaw, criminal lawyer, Horne & Wells
- David Underwood, director of import services, Dunavant Logistics