US House overwhelmingly advances Iron Dome funding initially scotched by 'Squad'
8 progressive Democrats, 1 Republican vote against $1 billion for Israeli missile defense system, 2 Dems vote 'present'; legislation will come before Senate next; PM lauds approval

By Jacob Magid Today, 10:06 pm

The US House of Representatives on Thursday voted overwhelmingly to pass legislation that will provide Israel with $1 billion for its Iron Dome missile defense system, days after the funding was removed from a government spending bill amid pressure from a small group of progressive lawmakers.

The Iron Dome Supplemental Appropriations Act passed 420-9 with two Democrats, Reps. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and Hank Johnson, effectively abstaining by voting "present."

Eight Democrats — Reps. Rashida Tlaib, Ilhan Omar, Ayanna Pressley, Cori Bush, Andre Carson, Marie Newman, Jesus Garcia, Raul Grivalva — and one Republican, Rep. Tom Massie, voted against HR 5323.

A number of Republicans changed their votes after initially voting against the bill. Ocasio-Cortez, who together with Tlaib, Omar, Pressley and Bush form the so-called Squad, had initially voted against the legislation, but changed her vote to "present" at the last minute. She was reported to have been visibly shaken up after casting her final decision.

The bill will next need the Senate's approval in order to pass, but the Upper House has yet to schedule a date for the vote.

If passed, the measure will earmark $1 billion in emergency aid for Israel to restock interceptor missiles for its Iron Dome anti-missile system, after they were depleted during May's war with Hamas-led fighters in Gaza. The defense system has successfully intercepted thousands of rockets launched out of Gaza at Israeli towns over the last decade.

Israeli leaders lauded the vote in a flurry of congratulatory statements issued moments after the vote.

“Thank you to the members of the US House of Representatives, Democrats and Republicans alike, for the overwhelming support for Israel and for the commitment to its security,” Prime Minister Naftali Bennett said.

“Whoever tries to challenge this support received an unequivocal answer today,” Bennett continued. “The people of Israel thank the American people and their representatives for their steadfast friendship.”

Ahead of the vote, Defense Minister Benny Gantz spoke to his US counterpart Lloyd Austin and thanked the administration “for the processes to equip Israel with the means necessary to defend itself and its citizens,” his office said in a statement.

During the floor debate preceding Thursday’s vote, several dozen lawmakers from both parties rose to passionately argue in favor of approving the legislation. Republicans blamed Democrats for capitulating to their progressive colleagues to remove the Iron Dome aid from a stopgap emergency government funding bill on Tuesday.

Democrats shot back that the only reason they were forced to drop the $1 billion provision was because not a single Republican was willing to support the spending bill in the first place.

The Iron Dome Supplemental Appropriations Act was introduced on Thursday by House Appropriations Chair Rosa DeLauro following pressure from a group of Democratic lawmakers intent on demonstrating their party’s full-throttled support for Israel after the aid was pulled from the spending bill.

The one-time allotment of $1 billion in aid will come on top of $73 million approved for Iron Dome procurement earlier this year, and won’t count toward $3.8 billion that Israel receives in defense aid from the US annually. The amount is equal to 60 percent of the total that the US has spent on the system since 2011

Since 2011, the US government, which provided aid to help Israel develop Iron Dome, has sent Israel a total of $1.7 billion for the air defense system. In 2014, Congress and former president Barak Obama approved $225 million for Israel to replenish interceptor missiles following that summer’s war in Gaza.

The only lawmaker who spoke against HR 5323 from the House Floor was Tlaib, a Michigander of Palestinian descent.

“I will not support an effort to enable war crimes and human rights abuses and violence. We cannot be talking only about Israelis need for safety at a time when Palestinians are living under a violent apartheid system, and are dying from what Human Rights Watch has said are war crimes,” she said.

“The bill claims to be quote a ‘replenishment’ for weapons apartheid Israel used in a crisis it manufactured when it attacked worshippers at one of the most holiest Islamic locations, the al-Aqsa Mosque, committing again numerous war crimes,” Tlaib claimed, making no mention of Hamas rocket-fire or what Israel Police said were the violent protests on the Temple Mount that forced them to enter the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound ahead of the May Gaza war.

“Israel is an apartheid regime — [these are] not my words, but the words of Human Rights Watch and the words of Israel’s own human rights organization B’Tselem,” she said. “I urge my colleagues to please stand with me in supporting human rights for all.” More - <https://www.timesofisrael.com/us-house-overwhelmingly-advances-iron-dome-funding-initially-scotched-by-squad/>

Haifa man indicted for allegedly kidnapping woman, forcing her to rob bank

Prosecutors say Moshe Shoval used nude photos to blackmail female bank employee into putting on fake explosive vest, as part of scheme to steal NIS 3 million

By TOI staff Today, 7:32 pm

A Haifa man was officially accused on Thursday of kidnapping a woman, blackmailing her with nude photos and forcing her to enter a bank with a fake explosives vest in order to rob it.

Moshe Shoval, 69, was charged by the State Prosecution with attempted bank robbery, as well as kidnapping, extortion, assault, forgery, and sexual offenses.

According to the indictment, Shoval kidnapped the 31-year-old woman — who worked at the bank — and put the vest on her before ordering her to rob the bank on September 2.

He allegedly sexually blackmailed her with nude photos that he took against her will, threatening to publicize the photos if she did not do as he demanded.

The woman, who was initially arrested for her involvement in the attempted heist, has not been identified publicly.

Prosecutors say that Shoval arrived at the woman's home disguised as a member of the bank's security department and said that he needed to question her over a robbery at the bank last year. However, when she got into his car, he allegedly kidnapped her.

Along with the fake vest, prosecutors said that Shoval gave the woman a cellphone to pass to the bank manager as part of an alleged scheme to steal NIS 3 million (over $936,000) via an electronic bank transfer.

However, after the woman entered the bank, the manager was able to take the device from her, and she was arrested and taken for questioning.

Large police forces were called to the scene and several streets were blocked off in Haifa's Hadar neighborhood as officials feared the bomb she carried could be real, though police sappers determined it was fake after an hour.

Government COVID experts push strategy rethink as infections spread

Panel tells lawmakers to limit indoor gatherings to 300 people, also urges them to start making policies based on total case numbers and not just hospitalization rates

By Amy Spiro Today, 8:51 pm

The government's coronavirus advisory panel has urged cabinet ministers to change course and enact new restrictions on gatherings, warning that current policies are doing little to curb a prolonged surge of new infections.

During a meeting Wednesday evening, the panel of experts reportedly urged government officials to adopt an overall change in their approach to fighting COVID, which until now has largely sought to avoid the heavy restrictions seen under the last government.

“It is unreasonable to continue on the current course,” one expert said, according to the Kan public broadcaster. Other advisers were quoted by Channel 12 news as saying that the vaccination campaign pushed by Prime Minister Naftali Bennett and Health Minister Nitzan Horowitz has not done enough yet to curb rising cases, “and a change in policy is needed for the interim period until there is a significant and consistent decrease in serious cases.”

The advisers reportedly told government ministers that “the extent of rising morbidity over the past month has extracted a heavy human toll.”

Since the beginning of the coronavirus pandemic in Israel, 7,602 people have succumbed to the disease. Over the past month, 23 people with coronavirus have died on average per day in Israel. Since the start of September, more than 550 Israelis have died with the virus.

The experts reportedly told members of the coronavirus cabinet that the current approach — of making decisions based on only the number of series cases — is “dangerous,” and that adopting restrictions at an earlier stage “is the correct choice for the future in light of the lessons learned so far from the fourth wave.”

The panel also suggested specific moves to help curb the infection numbers, including limiting indoor gatherings to 300 people and making sure the Green Pass vaccine passport program requires a booster shot.

As of Thursday afternoon, there were 65,719 confirmed active coronavirus cases in the country, with 1,035 of them hospitalized, 713 of those in serious condition and 202 on ventilators. While serious cases had dipped to 645 a week ago, they have risen over the past week, and topped 743 on Wednesday. [So Israel has according to this 1.5% of the positive case are actually sick and in the hospital. Did any of them get any treatment before they got sick enough to go to the hospital? I doubt it because they don't seem to believe that HCQ or ivermectin are of any value. The number of 'cases' is simply the number of positive tests and from what I have been seeing in the news from Israel it seems that many of those probably were already JABBED. – rdb]

Despite Israel's high vaccination rates, the positivity rate has remained above 5% for more than a month, after staying below 2% from March through July. On Wednesday, 5,984 Israelis tested positive for COVID-19 — 5.65% of all those tested.

Vaccination rates have dipped considerably over the holiday period, beginning with Rosh Hashanah two weeks ago, but experts believe they will pick up again once children return to school and adults return to work next week.

While the government under former prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu enacted three strict lockdowns throughout COVID, Bennett has largely avoided any major restrictions and urged the continuation of daily activities alongside vaccinations and mask-wearing. But health experts — including Health Ministry director-general Nachman Ash — are reportedly pushing for a change in course to the government's approach, arguing that it has not done enough to curb cases.

The majority of new cases each day are among school-age children, most of whom are not vaccinated against COVID-19. As of Thursday morning, 36,822 of the active COVID cases were among school-age children, making up more than 56% of all current cases. Another 90,000 students were in mandatory quarantine after exposure to a COVID patient. [Since the majority of pediatric cases don't get that sick this should simply help get Israel to a state of herd immunity. – rdb]

On Thursday morning, the Health Ministry formally instructed principals to bar teachers who are unvaccinated and refuse to submit to regular testing from entering classrooms. The new regulation, which will take effect on October 3, will also prevent such teachers from being paid and ban them from teaching remotely.

Israeli airlines demand government bailout for COVID losses

In joint letter to Bennett, El Al, Arkia and Israir say they are in danger of collapse, blame cabinet's COVID policies for devastating their sector during pandemic

By Stuart Winer Today, 11:27 pm

Israel's flagship airline and two other local carriers demanded on Thursday that the government provide them with financial and regulatory support, warning that otherwise they could collapse due to the coronavirus pandemic's effect on the travel industry.

A letter signed by the CEOs of El Al, Arkia and Israir — sent to Prime Minister Naftali Bennett, Finance Minister Avigdor Liberman and a series of other lawmakers and officials — blamed government policies for cratering their businesses and urged a rollback of travel restrictions, claiming their industry had missed out on bailouts offered to other sectors.

“There are doubts that Israeli aviation companies will be able to survive the crisis without government support,” wrote El Al CEO Avigal Soreq, Arkia CEO Gadi Tepper and Israir CEO Uri Sirkis.

In the letter, the companies noted that the aviation industry has been in a crisis for a year and half because of the coronavirus outbreak — during which time they operated under “conditions of serious uncertainty” as travel demands dropped off.

The lull in passengers was directly influenced by government decisions and health ministry orders, the CEOs argued. Quarantine rules, entry bans on non-citizens or residents, and government calls to not take unnecessary flights all had an impact, the companies noted.

El Al had been financially struggling before the COVID pandemic hit and largely wiped out international travel. Last year, the airline was purchased by 27-year-old yeshiva student Eli Rozenberg, who was financially backed by his non-Israeli father, Kenny Rozenberg. Earlier this year, the senior Rozenberg became an Israeli citizen — a requirement to own a controlling stake in the Israeli national carrier — and took control of the company.

A bailout package deal reached between El Al and the government last year included the airline laying off close to a third of its staff in exchange for $210 million from the state in advance ticket sales for security personnel. To complete the deal, El Al also agreed to issue $150 million in new shares, and for the controlling shareholder to inject $43 million into the firm.

However, on Wednesday, Soreq sent a letter to treasury director Ram Belnikov claiming that the $210 million bailout had not been enough to pull the airline out of its nosedive.

Soreq asked for $100 million in immediate compensation for the impact of COVID-19 restrictions, to be included as part of a plan to streamline its operations in return for government aid. The figure is twice the $50 million the Finance Ministry had offered El Al as a balloon loan.

The El Al recovery plan will see it sell off planes to reduce its fleet from 45 to 29 while also cutting its workforce as a result, Soreq said.

El Al reported a loss of $86 million in the first quarter of the year, compared to a loss of $140 million in the same period a year earlier. Revenue slid 64% to $117 million from $321 million in the same period a year earlier, and costs including salaries and jet fuel declined 54%. For the full year 2020, amid the pandemic, El Al saw its net loss surge to $531 million from $60 million in 2019.

On Thursday, the three airlines called for Bennett to call a meeting with the Finance, Transportation, Tourism and Health ministries in order to discuss “concrete and detailed proposals and necessary steps for the government to take in order to ensure the continued existence of Israeli aviation.”

It noted that many governments around the world have provided assistance to their own local airlines, presenting a further challenge for Israeli companies who found themselves competing against those with state backing.

They pointed to the recent approval by Bahrain for its national carrier to operate a route to Tel Aviv, while Israeli companies have not yet been approved by local authorities to offer a similar service.

“Local aviation companies are a vital national infrastructure,” they noted, warning that their collapse would harm vital national interests.

Among the measures the companies demanded was a model for compensation similar to that offered to other industries impacted by the COVID-19 economic crisis, along with a review of a Finance Ministry plan that demands investment from aviation company owners, which was not made in other industries.

The companies also asked for a risk management assessment of health regulations at Ben Gurion International Airport, including the quarantine requirements for those arriving to the country.

They also sought a framework to enable vaccinated tourists to enter the country by taking PCR or serology tests at the airport, currently only available to Israelis and some visitors. <https://www.timesofisrael.com/israeli-airlines-demand-government-bailout-for-covid-losses/> [Tourism is one of the mainstays of Israel’s economy and there has been almost no significant tourism for 2 years. I can certainly see why the airlines and tour industries are in the tank as well as the hotel industry which fortunately can at least have some local indigenous Israeli tourism. – rdb]

Leaked protocol reveals police ignored red flags ahead of deadly Meron crush

Ynet exposé: Damning document shows police top brass were aware of knotty circumstances that led to the worst civilian disaster in Israel's history, claiming the lives of 45 people, but decided to greenlight the event anyway
Eli Sinyor | Published: 09.23.21, 12:12

Leaked protocols of an April meeting of Israel Police's top brass seen by Ynet reveal that senior officials were aware of the knotty circumstances that led to the deadly stampede on Mount Meron — considered the worst civilian disaster in Israel's history — but decided to greenlight the event anyway.

Tens of thousands of ultra-Orthodox Jews thronged the Galilee hillside tomb of second-century sage Rabbi Shimon Bar Yochai on April 30 for the annual Lag BaOmer festival that includes all-night prayer, mystical songs and dance.

During the ceremony, part of the crowd surged into a narrow tunnel, with 45 men and boys trampled or asphyxiated to death and 102 others injured to varying degrees, among them U.S. and Canadian citizens.

The April 19 meeting revolved around all the different and complex security issues pertaining to the event, including COVID-19 restrictions, crowd control and securing access routes to the tomb site.

Ynet has compiled some of the main points raised by police higher-ups in the damning document:

Who gave the orders?

To this day, Police Northern District Commander Maj.-Gen. Shimon Lavi, who oversaw the event on the ground, remains the only official to publicly take responsibility for the tragedy. However, the protocols show that Israel's top cop — Police Commissioner Yaakov Shabtai — was the one who pushed to authorize the mass event without any restrictions on the number of parishioners allowed on the mountain.

*Police Northern District Commander Maj.-Gen. Shimon Lavi and Police Commissioner Yaakov Shabtai

“Israel Police’s stance is that it will not be able to effectuate any enforcement activities on any [COVID-19] restrictions,” Shabtai was quoted as saying in the discussion’s summary. Nevertheless, he later stated that “citizens should be allowed free entry to Mount Meron...”

Securing the deadly tunnel

Shabtai and others at the meeting recognized the dangers entailed in allowing large masses of people to pass through the tomb site’s narrow walkways at the same time.

“These issues require concentration of effort and attention in the preparation in light of the large number of participants in a small and limited space and the tangible danger to human life,” he said.

*The narrow walkway on Mount Meron in which the stampede took place

He ordered to bolster security forces around access routes to direct the traffic and ensure that evacuation and escape routes remain open for any contingency.

Limiting the number of parishioners to 10,000

Northern District Commander Lavi was the only official present at the meeting who pushed to put a cap on the number of participants allowed on the mountain concurrently.

“I recommended an outline... [allowing] 10,000 people to enter the mountain at any given moment. The outline is challenging, but we must make a decision,” Lavi said in the meeting.

Mission: impossible

An other official who sounded the alarm about a potential disaster was then-head of police Operations Department Maj.-Gen. Amnon Alkalay who pointed to the site’s rickety infrastructure and called to prepare for a potential mass-casualty event.

Alkalay also admitted that the police would have been unable to enforce coronavirus restrictions at the packed festival if any had been imposed.

“Israel Police will not be able to meet the restrictions... Choosing between safety and health — safety comes first, and preventing overcrowding would serve both purposes,” he said.

Then-Israel Police legal adviser Ayelet Elyashar and Human Resources Department chief Maj.-Gen. Boaz Goldberg also joined Alkalay’s warnings, stating that enforcing such measures would not be feasible.

Israel launched a state inquiry into the stampede at the pilgrimage site to determine what led to the tragic event.

Some Israelis had questioned whether the former government and police were reluctant to further limit the crowd size because of pressure from influential ultra-Orthodox leaders.

Shabtai and other officials denied such allegations but the now leaked document may suggest otherwise.

Launched shortly after a new government was sworn in, the state commission of inquiry holds court powers in that it can summon witnesses and require them to produce documents or any other evidence it deems relevant. Its findings will be presented to the government though they are not legally binding.

If the panel, headed by former Super Court chief Miriam Naor, were to find suspicions of criminal conduct it would have to report those to the Israeli attorney general.

Israel Police said in response: “The incident is under investigation by a state commission of inquiry and therefore, at this stage, we will not be able to respond on the matter.” <https://www.ynetnews.com/article/rkyh7jk7f>

Liberal Jewish U.S. legislator to introduce 'Two-State Solution Act'

Democratic representative Andy Levin's 'Two-State Solution Act' formally states 'that the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza are occupied territories'; Bill expected to face universal opposition in both the House and Senate
i24NEWS | Published: 09.23.21, 17:18

A liberal Jewish U.S. legislator is set to introduce a bill Thursday that would make the two-state solution the official policy of the United States regarding the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Andy Levin, a Democratic representative from Michigan, is set to unveil the legislation on Capitol Hill during a debate about the U.S. approach to the Jewish state that has divided Democrats between the moderate and progressive wings of the party.

Rep. Andy Levin, D-Mich., speaks at the House of Representatives (Photo: AP)

That divide was clear this week when progressive Democrats in the House of Representatives blocked $1 billion in funding to replenish Israel's Iron Dome missile defense system that was depleted during May's 11-day conflict with the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip.

Levin already has 18 Democratic co-sponsors and the support of left-leaning pro-Israel groups, including J Street. [So the leftist "jewish" group in the US would want legislation demanding Israel to cave into some supposed agreement with the terrorists "PA" that would ultimately end up being a suicide deal? It is simply unbelievable the stupidity of many of these self hating folks. – rdb]

Still, the bill faces an uphill battle in Congress with expected universal opposition from pro-Israel Republicans and skepticism from moderate pro-Israel Democrats in the House and Senate.

The bill will also face opposition from the current Israeli government headed by nationalist Prime Minister Naftali Bennett.

The "Two-State Solution Act" formally states "that the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and Gaza are occupied territories and should be referred to as such consistently in official United States policies, communications, and documents."

It is unclear why Gaza is mentioned since Israel unilaterally withdrew from the coastal enclave in 2005.

The bill also states "that the establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories is inconsistent with international law."

The harsh stance on the disputed territories and Jewish communities there is likely to face pushback from certain pro-Israel groups.

Levin also wants to reopen the U.S. consulate for Palestinians in Jerusalem, a move that the new Israeli government opposes. <https://www.ynetnews.com/article/syqdpq5xy> [The irony of this is that sometime in the future (and maybe near future) these leftist dweebs may be forced to flee this nation and there will be no place for them to run at the rate they are going. – rdb]

GOP bill would keep settlement products labeled 'Made in Israel'

Tenney argued that returning to the pre-Pompeo policy would empower those who seek to boycott the Jewish state.

New legislation by Republicans in the US House of Representatives seeks to reinforce the Trump-era instruction to label products of Judea and Samaria "Made in Israel."

Rep. Claudia Tenney (R-New York), a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was set to introduce what she called the Anti-BDS Labeling Act on Thursday, meant to stop the Biden administration from reversing the instruction from former US secretary of state Mike Pompeo in the final months of the Trump administration.

Pompeo's November 2020 decision reversed a guideline from the Clinton administration in 1995 that settlement goods must be labeled "Made in the West Bank." That was not enforced until 2016, when the Obama administration republished those guidelines, warning that violators could incur fines.

US law states that every article of foreign origin imported into the US must be marked with its country of origin unless an exception is provided by law. Though decisions about settlement labeling have been made by the executive branch in recent decades, Congress has the authority to pass laws regarding foreign commerce.

Tenney argued that returning to the pre-Pompeo policy would empower those who seek to boycott Israel. Labeling Israeli products from Judea and Samaria differently from other products makes it easier to seek them out for boycott.

"The Boycott, Divestment, and Sanctions movement is fueling antisemitism in the United States and around the world," she stated. "The United States must remain steadfast in our support for Israel, which is why I introduced this bill.

My legislation defends the integrity of the Jewish state and prohibits the Biden administration from targeting specific goods made in Israel by banning 'Made in Israel' country-of-origin labels." [Maybe this lady needs to educate some of the other members of congress as to why Israel is an important country and needs not to be divided and turned into a terrorist hellhole. – rdb]

Earlier this year, The National, based in Abu Dhabi, reported on a leaked memo of the Biden administration's plans in relation to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which included reversing the labeling decision, but they have yet to announce any changes. The US Embassy in Israel's spokesperson said, "We have no changes to announce to the current guidelines on country of origin markings."

Tenney accused the Biden administration of not being able to "stand firm against radical activists."

She submitted her bill just days after the House Democratic leadership removed funding for Israel's Iron Dome missile defense system from a bill, because the party's Left flank refused to support the legislation otherwise. House Democrats introduced a new bill just to fund Iron Dome batteries, which is expected to go to a vote on Thursday.

The Democrats have a majority in Congress, and as such, the anti-BDS bill is unlikely to pass.

The bill's cosponsors are Republican representatives Lee Zeldin of New York, Ronny Jackson of Texas, Brian Mast of Florida and Joe Wilson of South Carolina, all of whom are members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Senators Tom Cotton and John Boozman of Arkansas, Rick Scott and Marco Rubio of Florida, Bill Haggerty and Marsha Blackburn of Tennessee, Ted Cruz of Texas and Thom Tillis of North Carolina were to introduce a companion bill.

Jackson said that were the Biden administration to return to labeling settlement products as "Made in the West Bank," it would be an antisemitic policy.

Zeldin expressed concern about a "growing embrace of the BDS movement against Israel and attempted normalization of antisemitic and anti-Israel ideals by private companies, institutions of higher education and political activists."

"This legislation takes important steps to combat anti-Israel and antisemitic boycotts by protecting American companies from being roped into international boycotts targeting Israel and other US allies, and firmly establishing Congress' position in opposition to the BDS movement," he stated.

The recent decision by ice cream company Ben & Jerry's to boycott settlements by opting out of renewing its contract with its Israeli licensee has led a number of US states – New Jersey, Florida, Arizona and Texas – to move toward divesting from its parent company Unilever. <https://www.jpost.com/israel-news/israeli-settlement-products-to-remain-labeled-made-in-israel-by-gop-bill-680108>

US presses Iran for swift return to languishing nuclear talks

Foreign diplomats have been meeting Iran's foreign minister on the sidelines of the annual UN General Assembly to gauge Tehran's willingness to return to the talks in Vienna

By Matthew Lee Today, 8:59 pm

NEW YORK (AP) — The Biden administration is imploring Iran to quickly return to talks on its nuclear program after a three-month hiatus caused by its government transition, warning that the window for negotiations may soon close.

A senior administration official said Thursday that US patience is wearing thin and that further delays while Iran continues to expand its atomic capabilities could lead Washington and its partners to conclude a return to the landmark 2015 nuclear deal is no longer worthwhile. [Well do tell!. If in fact Iran is a little over one month from being able to have nuclear material suitable for an explosive then it is already too late because by the time you get things enacted they would have hidden all their material will simply work on their delivery system. No one is really certain that they aren't already capable with nuclear material because they have extensive relations with Pakistan, China, and North Korea all of whom are nuclear capable. Their IRG and military has been essentially exempt from inspection for most of the past 10 years anyway. It is stupid to consider any deals however it was even more stupid of the US and EU folks to entertain this in the first place. – rdb]

The official, who briefed reporters on condition that he not be identified by name, spoke as diplomats from the remaining parties to the agreement have been meeting Iran's foreign minister on the sidelines of the annual UN General Assembly to gauge Tehran's willingness to return to the talks in Vienna.

While Iran has said it is ready to rejoin the talks, it has not yet offered a date for a resumption, named a negotiating team or indicated that it is willing to pick up where the negotiations left off in June, according to the US official.

In discussions with representatives from the remaining parties to the deal — Britain, France, Germany, Russia, China and the European Union — the official said all of them had agreed on the importance of resuming the talks as soon as possible.

If the talks don't resume, the official said the US would at some point determine that Iran was no longer interested in the benefits that the accord offered or that its recent technological advances could not be undone by the limits it imposed.

The UN's atomic watchdog has said Iran is increasingly in violation of the deal, known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action or JCPOA, which former president Donald Trump withdrew the US from in 2018. The US has participated indirectly in the Vienna talks, which were aimed at bringing both Washington and Tehran back into compliance with the deal.

Israel has consistently urged against the resumption of the 2018 deal, although Prime Minister Naftali Bennett has adopted a more subtle approach on the issue than his predecessor. The EU's top diplomat, Josep Borrell, met Tuesday with Iran's new foreign minister, who reiterated Tehran's "willingness to resume negotiations at an early date," the EU said. Borrell met Wednesday with US Secretary of State Antony Blinken.

Borrell stressed "the need for full cooperation" from Iran and reiterated his concern about the overall trajectory of the Iranian nuclear program," the EU statement said.

The last round of talks in Vienna ended in June, ahead of Iran's elections that boosted the ranks of hard-liners. There had been speculation that the remaining parties to the deal would meet on the sidelines of this week's UN General Assembly. Sudan seizes assets of Hamas-linked firms, amid move toward West

Move comes as part of Khartoum's efforts to shed elements linked to longtime leader Omar al-Bashir, denying a safe haven to Gaza-ruling terror group

By TOI staff and Agencies Today, 9:35 pm

A Sudanese committee set up to recover public funds after the ouster of autocratic ruler Omar al-Bashir has taken control of companies linked to the Palestinian terrorist group Hamas, a source said Thursday.

The source, at the center of the committee, named the entities as property firm Hassan & Al-Abed, the Al-Bidaya agricultural project, the highrise Paradise Hotel and the Al-Fayha money transfer company.

“They got preferential treatment in tenders, tax forgiveness, and they were allowed to transfer to Hamas and Gaza with no limits,” a task force member told Reuters, on the condition of anonymity.

An unnamed source in Sudan’s ruling sovereignty council confirms the seizures to Israel’s Kan public broadcaster and said that all of the Gaza-ruling terror group’s assets in the country were confiscated.

Reuters described the seizures as part of an effort by Sudan to move toward the West after the overthrow of Bashir in 2019, in effect denying a safe haven for Hamas operatives to raise funds and move Iranian arms to Gaza.

Sudan signed a normalization deal with Israel last year as part of the Abraham Accords that also saw the Jewish state ink deals with the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain and Morocco.

Hamas, which rules the Gaza Strip, denied to AFP that it has any investments in Sudan.

“We have no problems with any Sudanese agency,” Hamas spokesman Hazem Qassem said.

Another Hamas official also denied any link to the seizures. “Some of what’s reported here is old. Most of it has nothing to do with Hamas,” Moussa Abu Marzouk said.

Bashir took power in a 1989 Islamist-backed coup that began three decades of iron-fisted rule.

After mass nationwide protests the army removed him in April 2019, leading later that year to a power-sharing agreement between civilian and military factions. Bashir was later convicted of corruption and jailed.

Despite oil wealth, Sudan under his rule was — and remains — one of the world’s least developed nations.

VIDEO: Peter Daszak says Fauci funded his dangerous coronavirus research

Tested 'this idea of predicting what the next emerging disease might be'

By Art Moore Published September 23, 2021 at 3:16pm

Peter Daszak and Dr. Anthony Fauci (via Twitter)

The evidence keeps mounting that, despite his vehement denials, Dr. Anthony Fauci's agency funded dangerous "gain-of-function" research at the Wuhan Institute of Virology that aimed to engineer SARS viruses among bats in China and make them transmissible to humans.

The latest is the unearthing of 2017 video in which British zoologist Peter Daszak told a global health conference his "work on coronaviruses in China" was conducted with "funding through" Fauci's National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the National Pulse reported.

Daszak, speaking on a panel that included Fauci, said that with "funding through NIAID to work on coronaviruses in China, we were able to test out this idea of predicting what the next emerging diseases might be."

"So we've all heard of SARS. We know that SARS is carried by civets. Well, actually, the host of SARS-like viruses, the viruses that the SARS coronavirus emerged from are bats," Daszak said at the "Healthy People, Healthy Ecosystems" conference in Washington, D.C., hosted by the Consortium of Universities for Global Health.

Daszak and Fauci were part of a three-member panel with the principal deputy director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Anne Schuchat. Titled "Future of Infectious Disease Pandemics: From Ebola to Zika, and Beyond," the panel focused on pandemic preparedness.

A description of the panel said: "Although much is known about how to detect and respond to existing infections, more research is needed to predict the likelihood of their emergence and spread, and to improve the precision and timeliness of public health responsiveness."

On Wednesday, the Telegraph of London reported a U.S. grant proposal shows Daszak and his team of researchers at the Wuhan lab sought funding for a plan to make coronavirus particles transmissible to humans and release them in bat populations. The 2018 proposal confirms researchers funded by the U.S. government were conducting dangerous gain-of-function research, engineering coronaviruses that possibly escaped the lab and caused the global pandemic.

~ The research – to make the SARS, MERS and flu viruses more virulent and transmissible to help understand them and prepare treatments and vaccines – was so dangerous that the Obama administration put a moratorium on it in 2014. The New York Times reported when the moratorium was lifted in 2017 that the research "alters germs to make them more lethal."

"Critics say these researchers risk creating a monster germ that could escape the lab and seed a pandemic," the Times reported at the time.

'World without borders'

The 2017 conference host, the Consortium of Universities for Global Health, said the event supported its vision for a "world without borders," the National Pulse reported. [Does this sound familiar? This is the globalist's dream and has been for years. This is why "bi-dum" and friends have pushed for the border destruction and will continue to do so. This is the universalist world with the elite running things and everyone else is a troll or drone. – rdb]

Daszak said his team "worked in China to go out and do surveillance in other bat species and say how many other SARS-like viruses are there."

"Is there something even close to SARS? And sure enough, there was," he said.

The panel summary said disease outbreaks "illustrate that we are ill-prepared to mitigate the impact of a novel virus or prevent its emergence."

"A global initiative to identify and characterize every significant viral threat circulating in the world is achievable over the next ten years – a critical and essential step towards ending the pandemic era."

See video of Daszak's remarks:

Daszak silenced debate over origins

Last Friday, the British journal The Lancet published a letter from 16 scientists calling for another look at the lab-leak theory.

The scientists said The Lancet's publishing last year of a letter organized by Daszak disregarding the lab-leak theory as "conspiracy" had "a silencing effect on the wider scientific debate, including among science journalists."

In July, Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., sent a criminal referral to the Department of Justice accusing Fauci of lying to Congress about his role in funding research at the Wuhan lab.

Among many confrontations in Senate hearings, Paul asked Fauci in May if the NIH funded gain-of-function research at the Wuhan lab. Fauci declared "the NIH and NIAID categorically has not funded gain-of-function research to be conducted in the Wuhan Institute."

Fauci is seen on video at a January 2018 NIAID Advisory Council meeting announcing the reinstatement of gain-of-function research and defending its use.

AMA schools doctors on word manipulation to promote vaccinations

It's no longer 'coronavirus' but 'pandemic,' and it's not 'hospitalization rates' but 'deaths'

By Bob Unruh Published September 23, 2021 at 4:41pm

The American Medical Association is schooling doctors on word manipulation in its efforts to push the experimental COVID-19 vaccines to the American public, explains a report from Dr. Joseph Mercola, an osteopathic physician and best-selling author in the field of natural health.

He wrote a column at NOQReport, and included a video from Stew Peters, revealing that the AMA COVID-19 Guide for winter 2021 includes a section on "Background/Messaging on Vaccines, Vaccine Clinical Trials & Combating Vaccine Misinformation."

That, Mercola explains, "raises serious questions about the AMA's adherence to transparency, honesty, ethics and the moral standards to which it will hold its members." [Having previously been a member of the AMA and having watched this group for 50 years I can assure you that the AMA has no transparency nor honesty nor ethical standards and hasn't had for years. It is a political action group with a dreadfully biased group that runs it. I dropped out years ago. – rdb]

He explains that the AMA not only has nine "key messages" for doctors to emphasize, like an advertising theme, but instructs in the use of certain words.

For example, they are told not to say coronavirus or COVID-19, but instead to use "pandemic," and instead of "hospitalization rates," use "deaths," even though the words have completely different meanings.

It's not "government"; it's "public health agencies," and instead of "consequences" for not taking a vaccine, it's "the benefits of taking it."

Doctors are told not to tell patients, "getting the vaccine is the right thing to do," but "getting the vaccine will keep you safe," even if it does not.

"Discover-create-invent" isn't appropriate, but "research" is, their recommendations say.

It's no longer a "lockdown," but a "stay-at-home order," and COVID mandates are now "COVID protocols."

Mercola explains the guide's "key messages" stress the importance of eliminating nonmedical vaccine exemptions, the importance of flu vaccines and COVID shots, and expressing confidence in vaccine development

Mercola, whose career includes board certification by the American College Osteopathic General Practitioners, explained in a note above his column that, "You've probably heard that there's a lot of disinformation surrounding Covid-19 'vaccines.' If you heard it from the government, mainstream media, Big Tech, academia, or any of the various vaccine nannies doing their part to fight the so-called 'pandemic of the unvaccinated,' they were talking about sites like this one or people like Dr. Joseph Mercola." More - <https://www.wnd.com/2021/09/ama-schools-doctors-word-manipulation-promote-vaccinations/>

New study: Vaccine risks too high for children

Scientists find more deaths from shots amid uncertain long-term impact

By Art Moore Published September 23, 2021 at 8:37pm

A paper by scientists from Europe and the United States concluded after reviewing data that the risks related to vaccinating children outweigh the potential benefits.

"The bulk of the official COVID-19-attributed deaths per capita occur in the elderly with high comorbidities, and the COVID-19 attributed deaths per capita are negligible in children," they write in the journal Toxicology Reports.

The researchers pointed out that clinical vaccine trials lasted only a few months, and the samples were not representative of the total population. For adolescents and children, they argued, the trials had poor predictive power because of their small size.

"Further, the clinical trials did not address changes in biomarkers that could serve as early warning indicators of elevated predisposition to serious diseases," they wrote in the paper's abstract.

"Most importantly, the clinical trials did not address long-term effects that, if serious, would be borne by children/adolescents for potentially decades."

They concluded that a "novel best-case scenario cost-benefit analysis showed very conservatively that there are five times the number of deaths" attributable to each vaccine inoculation compared to those attributable to COVID-19 in the most vulnerable 65-and-older demographic.

"The risk of death from COVID-19 decreases drastically as age decreases, and the longer-term effects of the inoculations on lower age groups will increase their risk-benefit ratio, perhaps substantially," they said.

The highlights of the paper:

- Bulk of COVID-19 per capita deaths occur in elderly with high comorbidities.
- Per capita COVID-19 deaths are negligible in children.
- Clinical trials for these inoculations were very short-term.
- Clinical trials did not address long-term effects most relevant to children.
- High post-inoculation deaths reported in VAERS (very short-term).

On Monday, three days after a U.S. Food and Drug Administration advisory panel voted against Pfizer's application for a COVID-19 booster shot for people over 16, the drug giant announced clinical trials show its vaccine is safe and effective for children aged 5 to 11.

The company said it will submit its data to the FDA as soon as possible.

As WND reported Friday, with the Biden administration set to roll out its COVID-19 vaccination booster plan this week, the FDA panel concluded that, among many concerns, there is insufficient data to judge the Pfizer vaccine's risks to younger groups. The members highlighted the possible increased risk for heart inflammation, or myocarditis, particularly among males ages 16-17.

In July, Dr. Marty Makary argued in a Wall Street Journal editorial that the evidence behind the CDC's push to vaccinate children is flimsy, arguing the agency overcounts COVID hospitalizations and deaths, and won't consider whether or not one shot is sufficient for many people.

Makary, a professor at Johns Hopkins University, noted that at the time, the CDC had counted 335 children under 18 who had died with a COVID-19 diagnosis code in their record. The current figure is 439.

"Yet the CDC, which has 21,000 employees, hasn't researched each death to find out whether Covid caused it or if it involved a pre-existing medical condition," he wrote.

Without such information, the CDC Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices decided in May that the benefits of two-dose vaccination outweigh the risks for children 12 to 15.

"I've written hundreds of peer-reviewed medical studies, and I can think of no journal editor who would accept the claim that 335 deaths resulted from a virus without data to indicate if the virus was incidental or causal, and without an analysis of relevant risk factors such as obesity," Makary wrote.

British science journalist Brian Deer contends in a BBC documentary that the CDC has a conflict of interest regarding vaccine safety issues:

Fauci's claim 'a total fabrication'

In a lecture earlier this month hosted by the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, Dr. Anthony Fauci insisted children should be administered a COVID-19 vaccine.

The top White House coronavirus adviser claimed "we have lost more children from SARS-CoV-2 than we ever lose for influenza — and we vaccinate children against influenza."

Kyle Lamb, a data specialist for Florida Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis, presented the evidence that Fauci's claim "is a total fabrication."

In the 2017-18 flu season alone, a span of about four months, the CDC estimates 643 pediatric deaths. Yet after more than 19 months of COVID-19, there have been a total of 439 deaths.

See the data presented by Lamb:

Did Anthony Fauci lie when he said more children have died from the virus than ever have died from the flu? Unless you think he's an incompetent boob that didn't learn a thing in 50 years in public health (hold the jokes please), then yes. And I will demonstrate that here.

— Kyle Lamb (@kylamb8) September 18, 2021

Further, studies -- including one by Stanford researchers on children and a recent one by Harvard and Tufts scholars on VA patients, have concluded COVID-19 hospitalizations have been overcounted, leading to overestimates of the severity of the disease. <https://www.wnd.com/2021/09/4947948/> [That has been the story from the beginning of this debacle and the vast majority of what you have been told has been a lie from Fauci, CDC, FDA and HHS. – rdb]

'Monumental': Arizona Senate to reveal audit of 2020 election

Event closely watched in other battleground states will be streamed live

By WND Staff Published September 23, 2021 at 7:10pm

Arizona state Senate Republicans will present a final report of their audit of the 2020 election results in Maricopa County on Friday.

The session at 1 p.m. Pacific Time – to be streamed live – will be closely watch by lawmakers in other states, including Georgia and Pennsylvania, who have been gathering evidence to support their contention that the outcome of the presidential election last fall was fraudulent.

Arizona Senate President Karen Fann and Judiciary Chairman Warren Petersen will hear the findings of the audit. Among the presenters are Doug Logan, CEO of the lead contractor Cyber Ninjas, and Ben Cotton, the founder of the digital forensics company CyFir.

In May, Cotton said he was able to recover data from vote-counting machines that the Senate audit team had accused Maricopa County of deleting.

Among the audit's critics is Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs, a Democratic candidate for governor, who has called it "political stunt" to cast doubt on election integrity.

However, a statewide, citizen-run canvassing launched in December – claiming no affiliation with the state Senate's audit – found 173,104 "lost votes," people who said they voted but no vote was recorded, and 96,389 "ghost votes" from invented voters.

After the canvassing report, Arizona candidate for secretary of state Mark Finchem joined state Sen. Wendy Rogers in calling for decertification of Arizona's electoral college electors.

The Arizona vote was certified after several official recounts, with Biden defeating Trump by 10,457 votes in the state. In Maricopa County, the margin was much higher, with Biden officially garnering about 45,000 more votes than Trump.

Dr. Shiva Ayyadurai, a former U.S. Senate candidate in Massachusetts and a data scientist who has four degrees from MIT, is scheduled to present his analysis of the vote at the session Friday.

Earlier this week, Maricopa County Supervisor Steve Chucri resigned after audio was released by the Gateway Pundit of him admitting the initial audit was flawed and there was evidence of fraud in the 2020 election. He also stated some of his colleagues could be opposing an audit because the results would show they lost the election.

In audio of a January phone call that was released Thursday, Chucri said there was evidence of fraud in other battleground states.

"And it's not just Arizona, right? It was Georgia, it was Michigan, it was all these other states, so it's not just like it was an isolated incident with no proof," he said.

Jovan Pulitzer, who had invented a system he claims can detect fraudulent ballots, believes the report is "going to be monumental."

"For the very first time you're really going to see how sick this system is that we call our election and voting system," he said in an interview Sept. 17 with St. Louis Real Talk radio station 93.3.

"It's about as efficient as a 1980s fax machine. And you're going to look at it and go, 'Wow, why didn't we do anything with it?'"

Pulitzer said the media won't report the truth and will "tell you you're an idiot, and you're a conspiracy theorist." He urged people to "put that aside and believe with your own eyes."

Blake Masters, a candidate for the U.S. Senate from Arizona, said in an interview Monday with Steve Bannon on "War Room" that people with whom he has spoken "here on the ground in Arizona" are "excited" about the report.

"The people have been waiting on this audit report for a long time, and I think people expect it to find some fraud," said Masters, who is chief operating officer for Peter Thiel's investment firm Thiel Capital.

People "disagree on the magnitude" of the fraud, he said, but state legislators have "let it drop that they expect to see some people in jail after this audit comes out."

Ken Bennett, a former Arizona secretary of state and Senate president, spotlighted some of the presentations scheduled for Friday in an interview Wednesday with John Fredricks on Real America's Voice.

Bennett said he will report his finding that Maricopa County failed to meet and comply with state statutes and election procedures. <https://www.wnd.com/2021/09/4947910/>

Buyer's remorse surges! Poll shows NOW voters would pick Trump

Survey shows he's up over Biden by 10 points, Harris by 13

By Bob Unruh Published September 23, 2021 at 2:08pm

In what prominent Washington Examiner columnist Paul Bedard classifies as "a stunning turnaround," a new poll shows the extent of the buyer's remorse evident following last year's presidential election.

The results from Rasmussen Reports shows that given a second chance at Election Day, voters now would pick President Donald Trump over Joe Biden 51%-41%.

"Just 247 days since President Joe Biden took the keys to the Oval Office, a majority of people appear to want him evicted and former President Donald Trump back," Bedard explained.

"And by a country mile."

Key was the fact that independent voters "overwhelmingly" said they would go for Trump, by 20 points.

And Democrats? Those from gaffe-plagued Joe Biden's own party?

One-fifth said they'd vote for Trump.

Trump, against a Vice President Kamala Harris, would win 52%-39%.

Coming Up Today: @JoeBiden daily presidential job approval % is - unchanged.

Trump 2024 Would Beat Either Biden or Harris

One-in-five Democrats say they would vote for Trump over either Biden or Harris ...

pic.twitter.com/GAIotGYAsw

— Rasmussen Reports (@Rasmussen_Poll) September 23, 2021

Rasmussen said the survey of 1,000 U.S. Likely Voters was done Sept. 21-22 and the margin of sampling error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The turnaround comes after Biden took office and created a crisis at the southern border by canceling President Trump's border security programs. Then there's also the Afghanistan withdrawal catastrophe where Biden left behind, to be under the thumb of terrorists in the Taliban, hundreds of Americans and thousands of Afghans who had helped the U.S. there.

And tens of billions of dollars worth of American war machinery.

Then there's inflation that's hitting all Americans in their wallets. There's his party's attempt to take over all elections. And his party's COVID mandate agenda, as well as its pro-abortion agenda.

And voters probably remember that a Media Research Center poll shortly after the election found that nearly one-third of voters who chose Joe Biden were not aware of the evidence linking the former vice president to corrupt financial dealings with China and other nations through his son, Hunter. Had they known, according to the survey, President Trump would have won at least 289 Electoral College votes.

Bedard reported, "The survey is the latest of dozens that have shown Biden sinking like a stone. Many have turned south since the disastrous withdrawal of U.S. forces and diplomats from Afghanistan and the surge of illegal immigrants over the U.S.-Mexico border.

"Others have shown that people are growing worried about Biden's competence and ability to stay in office long enough to run for reelection."

Trump already has hinted several times that he might run in 2024, promising a decision is coming soon and his fans will be very "happy."

Bedard noted that another recent poll, by McLaughlin & Associates, revealed "voters want Trump's leadership style back."

In that poll, when asked about Trump's "controversial" style, voters said, by 52%-44% that it "wasn't so bad."

They, by a 56%-40% margin, said "I'm coming to appreciate Trump more, and I'm thinking we need a bit more of Trump's toughness right now." <https://www.wnd.com/2021/09/buyers-remorse-surges-poll-shows-now-voters-pick-trump/> [I am not so sure that this would not be pretty representative of what the actual vote was last November because if and when there are enough audits I think you will find that sleepy joe lost big time. – rdb]

EXCLUSIVE: New emails reveal Hunter Biden asked for $2 million plus 'success fees' to help unfreeze Libyan assets

Two previously unpublished emails offer a window into Beltway influence peddling — and how a potential client viewed Hunter Biden as an "alcoholic" and "drug addict." Teresa Kroeger/Getty Images for World Food Program USA; Samantha Lee/Insider

Mattathias Schwartz 10 hours ago

Two previously unpublished emails sent by business contacts of Hunter Biden indicate that the president's son requested an annual retainer of $2 million to help recover billions in Libyan assets frozen by the Obama administration.

The emails, obtained by Insider during reporting on an unrelated matter, are not connected to the controversial emails from Hunter Biden's laptop, which his supporters have claimed were distributed as part of a disinformation campaign. And while it appears from the new emails that the Libya deal was never consummated, the documents offer a window into the mechanics of Beltway influence peddling, and the stock that was put in Biden's political connections — particularly his relationship with his father, who was vice president at the time.

The first email, dated January 28, 2015, was sent from Sam Jauhari, a Democratic donor with businesses in the Persian Gulf, who was helping spearhead the Libya project. It was addressed to Sheikh Mohammed al-Rahbani, another Obama campaign donor involved in the proposal. In the email, Jauhari is frank about what Biden would bring to the table, and what he says Biden wanted in return:

Per phone conversation I met with #2 son. He wants $2 per year retainer +++ success fees. He wants to hire his own people - it can be close circle of people for confidentiality. His dad is deciding to run or not.

His positives are he is Chairman of UN World Food Program, son of #2 who has Libya file, access to State, Treasury, business partner SofS [Secretary of State] J. [John] Forbes K [Kerry] son and since he travels with dad he is connected everywhere in Europe and Asia where M. Q. [Muammar Qaddafi] and LIA [Libya Investment Authority] had money frozen. He said he has access to highest level in PRC [China], he can help there.

His negatives are that he is alcoholic, drug addict - kicked [out] of U.S. Army for cocaine, chasing low class hookers, constantly needs money-liquidity problems and many more headaches.

We should meet in Gstraad or London to decide next steps.

At least one aspect of Jauhari's assessment of Biden is erroneous: Biden was discharged from the Navy Reserve, not the Army, and it was never confirmed that Biden's positive test for cocaine was the reason. But the tally of his "positives" reflects a keen sense of what he could offer the project. Biden's position at the United Nations meant he enjoyed face-to-face access to heads of state. In his memoir, Biden recalls a sit-down with King Abdullah II of Jordan. "The only reason the king had agreed to meet," he wrote, "was out of respect for my dad. I guess you could chalk it up to nepotism, in the best possible way."

Biden's apparent offer to provide "access to the highest level" in the Chinese government is also telling. China, which was attempting to strengthen its position in Africa, had been a particular source of frustration for Libya's new government, which was struggling to free up $15 billion in foreign assets that had been frozen by Obama during the Qaddafi regime. In 2013, according to The New Yorker, Hunter Biden had traveled with his father on an official visit to Beijing, where he had arranged for the vice president to briefly meet one of his business partners in the lobby of the American delegation's hotel.

Such access may, in fact, have been worth the price that Biden was cited as quoting. Two people close to the negotiations told Insider that the "$2 per year retainer" mentioned in the email meant $2 million. "My recollection was that anything that had to do with Hunter started at $2 million," said one. Jauhari and his partners, according to other documents obtained by Insider, expected to pocket as much as 5% of whatever sanctioned money they could free up for Libya. That meant a possible payday in the hundreds of millions. It's unclear whether any "success fees" for Biden would have been pegged in some way to those proceeds.

The second email, dated February 26, 2016, indicates that the talks with Biden continued into the following year. In it, Jauhari and al-Rahbani receive a report by John Sandweg, a Washington lawyer who had served as acting director of Immigration and Customs Enforcement under Obama. Sandweg had reached out to Biden's team about the Libya deal:

I spoke with HB's team yesterday. They are interested in the project, but emphasized that for them to get involved, the team (lobbyists, lawyers and PR) would need to be a small group of folks they have a tight relationship with. They do not want a large group involved and they only want people with whom they have a close relationship with due to the sensitivities surrounding their involvement.

Sandweg, who at the time was working at a law firm called Frontier Solutions, confirmed that he was in touch with one of Biden's associates about the project. "They indicated they would consider it and I passed the message back," he told Insider. "Jauhari wound up hiring a different law firm instead."

Neither Jauhari nor an attorney for Hunter Biden responded to Insider's requests for comment. The White House declined to provide a statement. Martin Auerbach, an attorney for al-Rahbani, said his client "has no recollection of seeing those emails contemporaneously" and "knows to a certainty that he never spoke to and has no recollection of talking about Hunter Biden."

In the past, both Joe and Hunter Biden have repeatedly said they never discussed the younger Biden's clients, and there is no evidence that Hunter Biden ever used his relationship with his father to deliver anything of substance for his clients. But what the emails do offer is a glimpse into the way influence peddling works in Washington. Both Jauhari and al-Rahbani were mid-tier political donors who had paid handsomely to attend Obama-Biden campaign events, where Jauhari posed for photographs with both Obama and Biden. Even if Hunter Biden couldn't provide them with direct access to his father, they understood his name could help win the backing of influential officials and investors. When it comes to opening doors in Washington, the illusion of access can be as valuable as hard currency.

The emails are also striking for what they reveal about the dual mindset of Beltway insiders who take part in such deals. Both Jauhari and Sandweg discuss Biden's potential involvement in the Libya project as a straightforward business proposal. At the same time, they make reference to "confidentiality" and "sensitivities," demonstrating an awareness that Biden's involvement could complicate his father's potential run for the White House. There is no mention of ethics, only optics.

As for the emails derived from Hunter Biden's laptop, some of which deal with his well-compensated efforts as a board member of Burisma, a Ukrainian gas company, neither the Biden family nor the White House has come forward to challenge their authenticity. "The Bidens," a new book released on Tuesday, confirms that at least some of them are genuine. <https://archive.fo/xr0Bm#selection-2585.0-2658.1> [Absolutely corrupt to the core. Commentary:

We May Have Left Afghanistan, Mr. President, But We Are Still at War

by Pete Hoekstra September 23, 2021 at 4:00 am

On Tuesday, Joe Biden presented his first United Nations General Assembly speech as president. I labored through almost 32 minutes of the speech when a most profound announcement was proclaimed: "I stand here today for the first time in 20 years with the United States not at war."

It was an odd boast, considering how the United States left Afghanistan and what it means for the future.

Our retreat from the Afghanistan battlefield left behind thousands of friends and allies and billions of dollars' worth of equipment.

We were never at war with Afghanistan. Our enemy was – and continues to be – individuals who take inspiration from a strict interpretation of Islam and employ terrorist tactics to press their cause.

Politically, we left the country as we found it – led by the same Islamist radicals who controlled the country 20 years ago. Despite what the Taliban might say, U.S. intelligence estimates that al-Qaeda could be fully reconstituted in Afghanistan in a year or two.

What happens after that? The president's UN speech did not look forward. If anything, his inaccurate statement that we are no longer at war anywhere in the world indicated his belief that the war on terrorism is over.

I never liked that term, "war on terror." Terrorism is a tactic; it is not the enemy we fought every day. The term has done more to confuse us than enlighten us. Nine days after the 9/11 attacks, President George W. Bush told Congress that those who attacked us were:

"a collection of loosely affiliated terrorist organizations known as al-Qaeda." It "is to terror what the Mafia is to crime."

"terrorists (who) practice a fringe form of Islamic extremism."

"a fringe movement that perverts the peaceful teachings of Islam."

"traitors to their own faith, trying, in effect, to hijack Islam itself."

Bush recognized that he had to put some context with the word terrorist so that the world would better understand the threat we were facing as well as the tactics that they would employ.

"Our war on terror begins with al-Qaeda," he said, "but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped and defeated."

We are still a long way from that goal, which means the threat to the homeland endures.

Reflecting on Bush's speech, one can see why the phrase "war on terror" became the widely accepted nomenclature. It was neutral. Gone would be the difficult references connecting the terrorist movement to Islam and Muslims. The need to define good Muslims versus bad/extremist Muslims would be eliminated. We would just paper over the difficult discussions that needed to take place but did not.

The terrorists, and their Islamist apologists in the West, actually used our response to their benefit. They widely labeled those who tried to connect al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations to Islamic dogma as Islamophobes and anti-Muslim.

It did not matter that the terrorists invoked Quranic passages as justification, or that groups such as ISIS and others explicitly state that their ultimate objective is a global Muslim state governed by religious law.

For much of the last 20 years, the lack of clarity as to who the enemy was and why they attacked us has eluded us. It has made it difficult to focus on what needed to be done and what victory might look like.

So barely a month after the U.S.'s disgraceful disengagement in Afghanistan, the president of the United States can declare that we are not at war. Words have meaning. The president cannot just declare that the war on terror is over and walk away. The enemy still exists. Those individuals described by President Bush in 2001 are still out there. Today, they are reinvigorated by their perceived success in Afghanistan. They are better equipped than any terrorist organization in the world because of what was left behind in Afghanistan, and they continue to be inspired by their view of the religion they are attempting to hijack, Islam.

No, President Biden can say what he wants but that does not mean it is so. The other side has a say in this. And as we saw as we were leaving Kabul, the jihadists spoke clearly, they are still at war with us. If the crack team of foreign advisers that the president is relying on, Secretary of State Antony Blinken, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Mark Milley, and Secretary of Defense Lloyd Austin, advised him that the United States is no longer at war, the world is in serious trouble.

The jihadists have not surrendered; they have not gone away. As a matter of fact, the world is a much more dangerous place than what it was just a few short months ago. The jihadists will be back. When they strike us again, let us hope that our leaders provide the necessary clarity this time around to identify the enemy and defeat them once and for all.

The War on Terror Sacrificed Thousands of Lives to Avoid Tough Political Decisions

Daniel Greenfield September 22, 2021

The infrastructure of Islamic terror is made up of three groups: domestic infrastructure, financial infrastructure, and organizational infrastructure. The domestic infrastructure consists of the populations who are the source of Islamic terrorism, the financial infrastructure comes from the state sponsors and billionaire funders of terrorism, and the organizational infrastructure is represented by the terrorist groups like Al Qaeda that run training camps and plan operations.

Going after training camps and terror leaders made sense, but it was also the most difficult militarily, requiring the deployment of troops to distant countries to engage in guerrilla warfare in hostile environments and counterterrorism in enemy cities, and the easiest politically.

Of the three infrastructures, domestic, state, and organizational, Osama bin Laden had the smallest constituency. Political leaders, Republican or Democrat, knew that they could expect to pay the smallest political price for targeting him or other Al Qaeda terrorists on the ground.

The War on Terror was structured to focus on the least politically difficult targets while avoiding the most politically difficult targets. What initially began as a broad spectrum campaign that detained large numbers of domestic Islamists and went after Islamist billionaires who were funding the terrorists narrowed down to nation building in response to political pressures.

Spending the lives of thousands of American soldiers was easy compared to the political challenges of rooting out the domestic Muslim Brotherhood operation, its mosques and organizations, or trying to hold Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and Qatar accountable.

Going after Al Qaeda training camps and leaders made sense, but in isolation it was a strategy that was doomed to fail because it targeted terrorist middlemen rather than their state sponsors or the growing Muslim populations in the United States that were being recruited for terrorism.

The Al Qaeda leadership could always fade away, amplify their propaganda, and crowdsource terrorism to local Muslim populations while we spent our strength chasing them around the world. And that's exactly what they did. While we tried to fight a conventional war, a new generation of Al Qaeda and ISIS propagandists, some operating inside our countries, used the money from their state sponsors to recruit and train the so-called "lone wolves" over the internet.

No one has yet come up with an answer to this new strategy for conducting domestic terrorism in America except to "partner" with Islamist groups on how to "deradicalize" terrorists. That and the Obama administration initiating a CVE program of arguing with the terrorists on Twitter.

This sort of thing is a politically safe strategy that avoids the explosive problem of a growing domestic Islamist population and an increasingly influential Islamist organizational infrastructure.

In 2001, the Islamist groups were mostly marginal. In 2021, they're an integrated part of the leftist intersectional movement, and presidents and senators advocate for their causes. What would have been politically difficult in 2001 has long since become politically untenable.

Like the Europeans, our political elites argue that Islam has nothing to do with Islamic terrorism because politicians adopt the narratives that fit the political realities, not the military ones. The same process that led to the disastrous Afghanistan withdrawal resulted in a generation of mishandling the War on Terror by following the politically easy narratives of hunting terrorists while neglecting the backers and recruits who could continually regenerate their movements.

The conviction that Islamic terrorism was the product of a tiny minority of extremists huddling in caves and training camps was a deliberate misunderstanding of how terrorism actually worked.

Al Qaeda was a startup operation drawing on the support of powerful countries and wealthy donors above, and on recruits from massive populations of devout Muslims below. Islamic terrorist groups are just the community organizers of the Jihad, recruiting the latter for the causes of the former. Terrorism could no more be defeated by destroying Al Qaeda than the Left was beaten when ACORN was broken up. It's easy enough for the big money to restore old organizations or form new ones that draw on the same conditions in the same populations.

Organizations are the most fragile of the three groups, but also the easiest to reconstruct.

And the Jihadists, like the Taliban, can simply outwait us knowing that as long as the money and the people are there, it's only a matter of time until they can rebuild their operations. Until then they're happy enough to let us pour billions into the countries they plan to inherit in the vain hope of convincing their people that an inclusive government is better than tribal supremacism

But the political establishment, Democrat and Republican, found two decades of war much more palatable than having to deal with the difficult political realities of Islamic terrorism.

And there's no sign of that changing any time soon.

Thousands of dead Americans are far more conceivable than admitting that the real axis of evil wasn't just a few countries with dictators, but encompasses the wealthy Muslim countries that are our allies, and that Islamic terrorism is rooted universally in the Koran and locally in ethnic tribalism, and cannot be countered by overthrowing a dictator and offering democracy lessons.

Standing up to oil-rich kingdoms would have cost far fewer lives than spending decades in Afghanistan, but it would have also blown up the economy and international trade. Fundamentally rethinking immigration would have been even more painful for the party of demographic change and for the party of cheap labor. War was the cheapest political option.

But it may be comforting to remember that we have been down this road before.

American leaders spent the first generation of the Bolshevik revolution bailing out the Soviet Union from famine and war, doing business with it, enabling its conquests, and finally letting the Communists take China and all of Eastern Europe before we learned our painful lesson.

The lesson was learned not because our leaders grew smarter, but because the ruthlessness and scale of the enemy became inescapable. Even then we spent the Cold War trying to figure out how to live in peace with the big Communists while fighting brushfire wars with the little Communists, leading to lots of lives lost and what looked like a pathway to our defeat.

The Soviet Union eventually collapsed while Communist China adapted, leaving us with a new war with an enemy that we keep enabling because it's politically and economically cheaper.

It took a generation after Tiananmen Square for our leaders to slowly realize that we are on a collision course with Communist China. So it shouldn't surprise us that they have yet to come to the painfully obvious conclusion about the Jihad even two decades after September 11.

We didn't defeat the Soviet Union. Our economic and social setup outlasted theirs. Communist China and the Islamists assume that their social and economic systems will outlast ours, and that they can exploit fractures and weaknesses in our systems to corrupt and conquer us.

The Soviet Union thought the same thing.

Our various enemies were correct in assuming that our political leaders lacked the will to make the necessary decisions. Where they erred was in assuming too much and pushing too far. The Japanese made that mistake in Pearl Harbor, the Soviets in Berlin, and Al Qaeda on 9/11. The Jihadists haven't made one final mistake yet, but history suggests that they will.

America, to its friends and enemies, and to its own patriots, can be an infuriating mix of weakness and strength, idealism and corruption, division and unity. And it's never entirely clear, even to us, when the tipping point that turns one into the other will unexpectedly arrive.

The great tragedy of the aftermath of September 11 is that our leaders proved willing to sacrifice soldiers, but not the dream of a democratic world order, and instead sacrificed lives to that dream. They took the road that was easiest for them and hardest for so many military men.

The War on Terror only became a forever war because we failed to confront two of the three pillars from which the enemy draws its strength. After two decades, we've seen the limitations of a military option that is not combined with foreign policy and immigration decisions that would cut off the true economic and demographic sources of the enemy's strength. Until our leaders are ready to make the hard choices and our people are ready to elect those who will, the forever wars will go on, not just in distant countries, but in the streets of our own cities.

We have failed to identify the enemy. And until we do, we can never win.

IPS Chief: I won't be a scapegoat, won't resign

Prison Services head Katy Perry says she expects head of Gilboa Prison to resign after 6 terrorists escaped.

Arutz Sheva Staff, Sep 23, 2021 9:39 PM

IPS Chief Katy Perry Noam Moskowicz/Knesset spokesperson

Israel Prison Service (IPS) head Katy Perry told her associates that she did not intend to resign after six terrorists escaped from the Gilboa Prison earlier this month.

"I will not be a scapegoat after years of neglect in the system and I will not resign. I expect the commander of Gilboa Prison to resign," Perry told her associates.

The commissioner's associates referred to the commission of inquiry set up to investigate the escape and said that "it is doubtful whether the commission set up will draw personal conclusions about her, and she is glad it was set up. Perry has to deal with the failures in the treatment of security prisoners due to the management of the previous chief intelligence officer."

Perry referred in closed conversations to allegations made against her in the media, including publications that there was political involvement in appointments in the prison system. "I saw the publications. It does no good to anyone, It was an assault on my dignity. Since I took office I have appointed close to 100 officers and there has not been a single political appointment. Behind the publications is a gang that came out disgruntled because they did not get what they wanted. All the current staff is now behind me."

She said, "I see the committee as an opportunity to open up the issue of security prisoners. The question of whether there was intelligence responsibility for other bodies as well is part of the mandate of the commission of inquiry."

Man arrested in anti-Semitic defacement of Atlanta autism center

Suspect arrested by police for August vandalism of Emory University Autism Center, including targeting a Jewish employee with a swastika.

Dan Verbin , Sep 23 , 2021 10:49 PM

Police have arrested a man suspected of vandalizing an autism center at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia in August, including drawing a swastika near the office of a Jewish employee.

Roy Lee Gordon Jr., a former part-time employee of Emory University, was arrested on Wednesday and charged with second degree burglary, according to a news release quoting Emory officials, reported the Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

There were no further details on Gordon's position at Emory or how long he had worked there.

Emory police had issued a warrant for Gordon's arrest on August 20.

Besides the swastika that targeted a Jewish employee, Emory Autism Center was also burglarized and other vandalism, including racial slurs written in the hallways and on vending machines, occurred. As well, a glass door was shattered with a large rock that was still there when the crime scene was investigated, reported Channel 2 Atlanta.

The racial slurs were written along the walls near workspaces used by two African American women.

"This case was a priority for our entire department, including our security systems team," Emory Police Chief Cheryl D. Elliott said in a statement. "I'm proud of the work from the team and our law enforcement partners to recognize the sensitivity of this case to our community and bring a resolution."

After the incident occurred, Emory University said in an email statement: "These acts of racism and anti-Semitism are painful for all of us at the [Emory Autism Center] and in the Emory community. They will not be tolerated, and every effort will be made to bring the perpetrators to justice."

Anti-Semitic incidents on American college campuses have become all too frequent, with a recent study highlighting the shocking growth of such incidents across the country.

Alums for Campus Fairness found in a survey done during the first half of 2021 that nearly 100 percent of respondents said anti-Semitism was a problem on their campus, with current students more likely to call it a "major" problem and graduates a "minor" one.

Ninety-five percent of respondents identified anti-Semitism as a problem on US college campuses, with three out of four describing it as a "very serious problem."

Similarly, a study conducted in September found that over 65 percent of Jewish college students reported feeling unsafe on campus, with half going as far as hiding their Jewish identity.

Those that said they hid their identity said that the impetus was to avoid physical or verbal attacks as anti-Israel and anti-Zionist organizations become increasingly aggressive in their campaigns and messaging against Israel and pro-Israel students. <https://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/313930>

'Disturbing' anti-Semitic incident at Ontario school prompts police investigation

Police in North Bay, Ontario are looking into a video of students making Nazi salutes while chanting "Heil Hitler."

Dan Verbin , Sep 23 , 2021 5:49 PM

Police in North Bay, Ontario are investigating a video they say contains "disturbing" footage of students participating in anti-Semitic acts at a local school, CP24 reported.

A police spokesperson said that on Friday police opened an investigation into whether a crime related to hate, genocide, or incitement of hatred had occurred at Ecole Secondaire Catholique Algonquin.

According to local media, the cellphone video contains footage of students making Nazi salutes while chanting "Heil Hitler" and making offensive statements about Jews.

The students were filmed on school property, according to CBC News.

Police Chief Scott Tod labelled the video in a statement as "very disturbing."

"I want to offer our condolences to the Jewish community of North Bay for having to see this video and see this happening in our community," he said. "There is no place for hate and intolerance in North Bay."

North Bay Mayor Al McDonald condemned the video in a statement on Twitter.

"We are a welcoming and inclusive community. Hate and racism has no home here," McDonald said on Tuesday. "It is everyone's responsibility to speak up against racism and hate when it appears."

In a statement, the Conseil Scolaire Catholique Franco-Nord school board said that anti-Semitism is “not tolerated in our schools.”

They added that they had contacted the police to help with investigating the incident.

Larry Fuld, the treasurer of the Sons of Jacob Synagogue in North Bay, told CBC News that the incident had been carried out by a “few rotten apples.”

"One of the things I love about North Bay is how un-racist it does appear, and is," Fuld said.

He added that he hoped the teenagers seen in the video would become educated about the Holocaust.

"That it's not just a prank, but it affects people deeply," he said. <https://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/313917>

Man defaced 17 London bus stops with 'Jews are grey aliens'

UK man behind graffiti in Jewish areas of London standing trial on charges of stirring up racial hatred.

Dan Verbin , Sep 23 , 2021 4:44 PM

A UK man is on trial for vandalizing 17 bus stops in Jewish areas of North West London with anti-Semitic graffiti that claimed Jewish people were “grey aliens,” the Mirror reported.

Nicholas Lalchan, 49, also allegedly defaced windows at an accounting firm.

The graffiti was written on bus stops with a black marker in Jewish areas of London such as Edgware, Hendon and Finchley, according to court proceedings.

Prosecutor David Patience told the jury that the vandalism was prompted by malice towards the Jewish community.

Lalchan admitted to criminal damage and possessing an article with intent to commit criminal damage, but pleaded not guilty to the charge that the graffiti was religiously or racially motivated and to the charge of stirring up racial hatred, reported BBC News.

Patience told the court that the graffiti accused Jews of being “grey aliens” and urged the searching of Youtube and Google to find further related offensive claims.

The graffiti was “seen by Jewish people and non-Jewish people who were distressed by what they saw and reported it to the police.”

Lalchan was arrested after a community support officer recognized his photo.

He was arrested at his home in North London. Police searched his backpack and found black markers and leaflets with messages similar to that of the graffiti, the court was told.

A further search of his home reportedly turned up more leaflets, markets and a USB stick containing additional anti-Jewish material. <https://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/313916> [As you can see, anti-Semitism is alive and well throughout the world. Abbas to threaten dissolution of PA if no state formed

In UN speech, PA chairman will threaten that PA will be dissolved if a Palestinian state isn't formed.

Dalit Halevi , Sep 24 , 2021 4:04 AM

Azzam al-Ahmad, one of the senior leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and Fatah, said on Thursday that Palestinian Authority (PA) chairman Mahmoud Abbas' speech at the UN General Assembly on Friday "will upset the enemies of the Palestinian people."

Speaking in an interview with official PA television, Ahmad said that in his speech, Abbas would express very strong views and emphasize an important point, namely the establishment of a Palestinian state or the dissolution of the Palestinian Authority. [I have never been convinced that the dissolution of the “PA” was a bad thing at all. It might get rid of some rotten actors. – rdb]

Riyad Mansour, the PA representative at the UN, noted that Abbas' speech would pave the way for a solution to the Palestinian issue based on international law and the decisions of international institutions.

In an interview with Voice of Palestine radio, Mansour said that what is now required of the international community is to implement in practice the decisions regarding the Palestinian issue and bring to justice the "perpetrators of crimes" against the Palestinian people. <https://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/313936>

Iran's FM: We're dedicated to elimination of Zionism

Iran's new Foreign Minister at Durban IV conference: Our nation's willpower is dedicated to the elimination of Zionism.

Elad Benari , Sep 24 , 2021 4:32 AM

Iran's new Foreign Minister, Hossein Amir-Abdollahian, spoke at the United Nations Durban IV conference, where he said his nation's "willpower is dedicated" to the elimination of Zionism, Fox News reported.

"As the new foreign minister of the Islamic Republic of Iran, I'm honored to announce that my nation's willpower is dedicated to the total elimination of all forms of racial discrimination, including apartheid and Zionism," said Amir-Abdollahian, according to the report.

"These are crimes that constitute horrible atrocities such as child killing and the creeping occupation through settlements, which extends to the proximity of Al-Aqsa Mosque," he added.

The Durban IV conference was boycotted by some 30 countries, including Israel, the United States, Canada, Australia, the United Kingdom, France, Hungary, Austria, the Czech Republic, the Netherlands, Germany, Bulgaria, Croatia, Romania and New Zealand.

On Sunday, Human Rights Voices, Touro Institute on Human Rights and CAMERA hosted a conference opposing Durban IV.

Ahead of the event, pro-Israel groups and NGOs also launched social media campaigns calling on countries to refuse to attend.

Anne Bayefsky, director of the Touro Institute on Human Rights and the Holocaust and president of Human Rights Voices who organized the counter-conference, told Fox News, "For the enemies of Israel who had high hopes that Durban IV would fast track Israel to political isolation and oblivion, the global gathering was instead a major setback. Not only did 34 states boycott, but they boycotted because the demonization of Israel was recognized as a form of modern antisemitism."

She noted that 75% of the countries speaking at the conference were deemed "not fully free" according to the definition by Freedom House that ranks countries based on freedom, and noted that "Durban IV proved to be an opportunity for the Iranian Foreign Minister to broadcast over UN WebTV around the world a call for the "elimination" of the Jewish state. In effect, backing another mass genocide for the one they claim never happened. And yet in the 21st century UN, it was just business as usual and nobody interrupted, cut the mic, or escorted him off the premises." <https://www.israelnationalnews.com/News/News.aspx/313937>
