

PRESS RELEASE

LUNDIE v FOREMAN

What do you do when you're faced with a challenge that appears to be insurmountable? The year 2023 presented the everyday person with the opportunity to engage with public figures, celebrities, and influencers, for the first time after Covid, without an event ticket or a paid subscription. By-standers of the incident jumped onto a bandwagon, camouflaged as a social experiment, to only find out that they were contributing to the mass manipulation trafficking scheme. The young woman, that hundreds including corporations targeted, never provided consent to the experiment. Why? The man orchestrating the scheme assaulted her with witchcraft in November 2022, and continued the attack to not only silence her voice but to take her life altogether. Jas Lundie, a CEO of a developing corporation and founder of a sprouting non-profit, frequently travels to popular cities located right here in the United States. Guided by God and her spiritual practices, CEO JAS, studies the cultures and economies for anthropological purposes. During her tenure in cities such as Los Angeles, Miami, San Diego, Memphis, and Augusta, CEO JAS was able to touch communities by spreading the gospel. Whether the approach was entrepreneurship literature, or performing arts, CEO JAS best known as Fruit, inspired the locals to develop a better relationship with God. She encouraged the natives to improve their everyday walk towards an eternal life by practical methods recorded within the Bible. Like any other assignment, CEO JAS decided to travel to Denver, CO after applying for an Executive Assistant position for Harvest Church. Although the intentions weren't set with employment in mind, the itinerary took a turn when the bishop of the church, a church revealed as a front to cover criminal activity such as murder, human sex trafficking, cyberstalking, and extortion, became fixated on the evangelist. Foreman, hungover with Satanism and Witchcraft, placed a target on her back.

For over a year and a half, Foreman and his accomplices plotted to steal intellectual property and her corporations while trying to coerce the rising executive into believing her purpose was to be a prostitute. Fighting for her life, CEO JAS reported several incidents to local PD. Aware that the chaos generated in her life was sourcing from Foreman, the activist began to speak out against the matter on her social media platforms. Struggling to gain income due to the scheme tethered to her devices, emails, and social medias, CEO JAS put her faith in the Lord and worked the law. She continued to pray and praise, believing that justice will be served, no matter the outcome. The prophet continued to work on everything she was assigned to release, including her books, songs, and projects.

As her movement gained traction, those that were lied to embarked on righting some of their wrongs. Those that were invested in the worst possible outcome continued the behavior and set out to aid Foreman in his ulterior motive, murder and a cover up. The victim of the scheme reached out to the churches that were associated when the “social experiment” first rocketed. While trying to gain information, to put together the pieces for law enforcement to understand the matter, she was lied to, turned away and ignored. She sent several emails asking to speak with the pastors and bishops, that she knew were contributing via social media, and never received a response.

She emailed numerous lawyers to seek advisement and because Foreman, day in and out, stalked CEO JAS, they were instructed to deny her counsel or do what many others did, ignore. Overtime, those who sympathized drew concern and to prevent the conversation from continuing, the assailants decided to wipe their hands clean and directed her family to falsely-commit her to an insane asylum. Literate of the law and being 100% sane, CEO JAS was able to advocate her way out of a cycle that would’ve destroyed all credibility.

Currently, Jas Lundie has six cases pending with the United States District Courts and it appears as if obstruction of justice is at play. Out of all of the police reports and FBI complaints filed, Foreman is still terrorizing her life with a voodoo doll. In order to prevent disability, a coma, or death she is working tirelessly to have him arrested. To undo the spiritual attachment, a ritual that Foreman did not receive authorization to perform, Foreman is set to be executed. The execution will ensure that CEO JAS is released from a curse. A curse that bounds Foreman to Lundie, spiritually by heart and mind. To God be All the Glory.
