

From Sewers to C-Suite: An Atypical Success Story

Brian LoVetere is a senior level executive and business owner who has gone from crawling through sewers for a living to building a new future by successfully climbing the corporate ladder.

Brian will share his story of overcoming major challenges, significant adversity and navigating through the troubled waters of change in both his personal and professional lives. Through his story he will share the success he has had by continuously reinventing himself during challenging times.

He will talk about what he has learned along the way and what he has done to overcome obstacles, in order to put himself on a path of living a proactive life.