Shenandoah

Just 75 miles from Washington, D.C., Shenandoah National Park features cascading waterfalls, vast vistas, fields of wildflowers, and quiet wooded hollows. With over 200,000 acres of protected lands that act as home a home to deer, songbirds, and black bear, Shenandoah Park was considered the American frontier before the rest of the continent was explored.

Biscayne National Park

Stretching over 270 square miles southeast of Miami to the Florida Keys, with 95% of it underwater, Biscayne National Park is the largest marine sanctuary in the National Park Service.

Biscayne National Park protects a rare, and exquisite, combination of aquamarine waters, emerald islands, and fish-bejeweled coral reefs.

From prehistoric tribes to shipwrecks, and pineapple farmers to presidents, Biscayne National Park houses evidence of 10,000 years of human history.
