RACING REVAMPED

BIGGER AND BETTER IN 2023

The roar of engines and the smell of burnt rubber are about to fill the air once more, as the world's top car racing competition revs up for its latest season. This year, fans are in for a treat, as the organizers have announced some exciting changes to the rules that are set to shake things up and make the competition more thrilling than ever before.

One of the biggest changes is the addition of a new ladder, the details of which are being kept under wraps for now. This new ladder will reward top performers in an unknown way, adding an element of mystery and anticipation to the competition.

In addition to the new ladder, three new tracks have been added to the competition's calendar, bringing fresh challenges and new opportunities for drivers to showcase their skills. These tracks are designed to test the limits of both driver and machine, and are sure to be a hit with fans and racers alike.

Unfortunately, one of the older tracks has been removed from the competition, but this loss is more than made up for by the arrival of the three new tracks. The organizers are confident that the new tracks will bring a new level of excitement and unpredictability to the competition, keeping fans on the edge of their seats from start to finish.

With these changes in place, the stage is set for a season of intense and unforgettable racing. The world's best drivers are gearing up for a new era of thrills, and fans are in for a wild ride. So, get ready to buckle up, hold on tight, and enjoy the ride!

INTRODUCING WESTERN SYDNEY RACING TEAM

Team Subaru have officially rebranded as Western Sydney Racing (WSR), signalling a new era for the team as they strive to become a formidable presence in the racing industry. WSR looks to establish a culture of excellence based on innovation, collaboration, and a commitment to success. This rebranding is indicative of the team's ambition and the commitment they have to their fans, who they want to see enjoying the fruits of their labour and celebrating with them in their future successes. WSR will be a team to be reckoned with and one that will strive to set a new benchmark for excellence in the racing industry.

PORSCHE CHALLENGES

Stuttgart, Germany - Porsche Racing Team's star driver, Jarryd Bryce, is gearing up for the upcoming competition season with a rigorous training program that includes both on-track sessions and time in the driving simulator.

Bryce faced some early challenges in the last season but managed to turn his performance around and become one of the standout drivers in the second half of the competition. With a renewed focus and determination, he is now taking a hands-on approach to preparing for the new campaign.

In addition to honing his driving skills, Bryce has also been extensively engaged with the engineering team, sharing his insights and ideas about car design and performance. His input has been invaluable to the engineering team as they work to refine and optimize the Porsche race car for the next season.

"Jarryd is one of the top drivers in the sport, and we are proud to have him as part of our team," said Pascal Zurlinden, Director of Porsche Motorsport. "His dedication and perseverance in the face of adversity, as well as his attention to detail, are second to none, and we are confident that he will be a key contributor to our success in the upcoming season."

Through his work on the track and in the simulator, Bryce has provided valuable feedback on handling, performance, and the overall driving experience. He is eager to put his training into practice and start racing again.

"I learned a lot from my struggles at the beginning of last season," said Bryce. "I'm really excited to be working with the team this preseason and feel that my input is making a real difference in the development of the car. I can't wait to get back on track and start racing again."

With Bryces extensive training and close collaboration with the engineering team, the Porsche Racing Team is poised for another successful season. Stay tuned for updates on their progress and for more exciting news from Porsche Motorsport.
