BETTER ENVIRONMENTS TO ELEVATE EDUCATORS

The Spirit of November

November is a time for remembrance and thanks. It's a moment to appreciate the family we cherish and the friendships that feel like family. Whether your Thanksgiving is spent around a table full of home-cooked food or with takeout alongside close friends, the focus is always on the people we share it with and the gratitude we feel for those connections.

As we gather this month, it's also important to acknowledge the history behind Thanksgiving and remember the Native American communities whose land we stand on. Their culture, resilience, and contributions deserve our recognition, and we should take time to reflect on their experiences, both past and present. In honoring their stories, we can better understand the importance of listening, learning, and showing respect.

Thanksgiving is about more than food or festivities; it's about coming together in gratitude. Whether you're celebrating with family, friends, or spending time reflecting on your own, take a moment to appreciate the blessings in your life and the history that brings us all together.

Classroom Confessionals

As educators and teachers in training, we all experience the daily stress of working in education. Classroom Confessionals is a dedicated space where you can anonymously share your thoughts, challenges, and experiences. This is an opportunity to connect with others who may be facing similar struggles, fostering a sense of community and support.

Sometimes I think I should of never quit teaching but I just could not survive the stress that came with it.

Former Teacher, Georgia

I get excited to become a teacher then see local news and get disappointed again.

Education Student, Florida

Do you ever truly get a break from teaching? Even on holidays I feel the same stress I get when entering a classroom.

Professor, Florida

My Instagram saved folder are just full of classroom decoration ideas that I can never get to. I use to be upset about but now I'm just happy to have the energy to get up.

Teacher, California
