BETTER ENVIRONMENTS TO ELEVATE EDUCATORS

Welcome to October!

With fall in full swing and the excited expectations of the seasons to come, October is the beginning of the tide of joy for both children and adults. The crisp air and vibrant colors of the changing leaves create an atmosphere of renewal and excitement. Families gather for seasonal traditions enjoying the warmth and togetherness that the season brings.

As the days grow shorter and the holidays approach, there's a sense of anticipation in the air. Children look forward to Halloween, while adults prepare for the gatherings and celebrations that make this time of year special. October serves as the perfect introduction to the joys of the fall and winter months, where moments of connection and joy of the seasons fill our hearts with happiness.

Whether it's cozy evenings by the fire or enjoying the beauty of nature's changes, October invites everyone to slow down and embrace the simple pleasures of life. It's a time to reflect, recharge, and relish in the warmth of both loved ones and the changing world around us.

OP-ED CLAUDIA BENOIT:

We're handing the mic over to our Communications Intern Claudia this month to gain a outside perspective on education. While currently an MBA student through her time at BEEE Claudia has gained new insight on not only education but the teachers who makes it happen. Gaining a new level of respect and admiration of all the teachers who helped her be who she is today.

(BEEE-Miami, FL) What if the traditional path to success—getting a college degree—no longer guarantees the stability and opportunities it once promised? In an op-ed publishing mid-October our intern Claudia gives us her perspective on the power of a college degree. Taking a dive in today's rapidly evolving job market, where even entry-level roles demand both a degree and years of experience, she ponders if a four-year college education is still the best path.

Reflecting on her personal journey and peers, many of whom followed the traditional route but still struggle to find jobs in a system that increasingly seems out of reach. She dives into the frustrations of the internship paradox and the reemergence of trade jobs.
