Psoriasis vulgaris is a chronic, sometimes debilitating, inflammatory disorder with multiple pathways of pathogenesis that can be associated with metabolic and cardiovascular disease. Juvenile form is very acute and wearisome.

This case history shows how Homoeopathic treatment resolves the gross pathological changes in an individual with marked manifestations forming an exact portrait of signs and symptoms. The careful case taking and correct analysis of collected data leads the physician to easily recognize the remedy and the result is always miraculous.

Baby Z, Female- 6 years, Date of consultation- 18-04-2015, Reg. No. 21057

Presenting Complaints

Baby Z presented with a 1-year history of a recurrent generalized pustular eruption. There were eruptions on whole body with itching, scaling, with some painful ones. Complaints started from right hand and spreading to whole body. She suffered from fever, malaise and pain. On examination there were pustules on an erythematous basis, spreading all over the body. The pustules in some areas coalesced to form lakes. Additionally, we found scattered erythematous plaques arranged in an annular pattern on the upper limbs and the trunk. The plaques were covered with superficial pustules. Laboratory evaluation revealed an increased leukocyte count. A massive desquamation of the whole skin preceded the healing.

Clinical history

She is very intelligent, anxious about her sufferings. She is thirstless. Has offensive perspiration.
