

THE INSIDE WAR

By Elissa Kerhulas

Genre: Crime Thriller

A U.S. based ISIS soldier barely survives a surprise bomb and suspects he's a pawn in a bigger scheme.

His adopted father, an ISIS leader, orders the soldier to kill the suspected agent who saved him, a kick-ass Sufi mystic. The soldier pummels the mystic with bullets, and is promised by his father, to lead a future large-scale Jihad.

But the mystic emerges unscathed from the soldier's bullets.

The soldier has 24-hours to kill the mystic before ISIS beheads him. But meanwhile, the mystic helps the soldier open to his inner truth, a new love and past memories of his ISIS father's ill treatment of him. Then a fellow ISIS soldier tries to kill him, but the mystic stops attack. Yet when the soldier witnesses the mystic killing people in the street, the soldier thinks he's been played. He apologizes to his father and re-avows his devotion to the Caliphate. But then he learns that his father has ties to a secret agency and is pursuing a national Jihad mission that will kill millions of U.S. citizens. The police hunt the soldier, framed for murdering another ISIS soldier. The mystic offers refuge and trains him in Silat martial arts. Just when the soldier feels ready to face his betrayers, he's abducted.

Can Najad escape his fate and discover the secret plot that will kill millions?

If you like the concept, I'd be happy to send you the script which received a "Recommend" from Extreme Screenwriting.
