

Iatrocide: The Midazolam Murders

Written by Simon Lee, Science Officer

Iatrocide - The act of killing a patient by medical treatment; iatro- + -cide , from Greek iatros (healer) + Latin -cide (killing).

Have you ever wondered why many people refer to Matt Hancock as "Midazolam Matt"? I will tell you...

The powerful sedative Midazolam was used to prematurely end the lives of tens of thousands of people (possibly more), and their deaths have been attributed to "Covid". The elderly and vulnerable in Britain were given a high dose "euthanasia drug cocktail" of Midazolam and Morphine.

In addition, elderly people who developed bacterial pneumonia were intentionally denied antibiotics, leading to their death, which were then labelled "Covid" deaths. In the UK, antibiotic prescriptions dropped 50% during 2020.

There were excess deaths in the spring of 2020, but there was no pandemic, and hospitals were not overwhelmed as was claimed.

In April 2020 A&E attendance was down 57% and bed occupancy was down 30% compared to the previous year.

There were 41,627 more deaths than the five-year average up to the 1st May 2020, and most of these occurred in April. 33,408 of these excess deaths mentioned "Covid" on the death certificate, and most of these people were over the age of 85.

Office for National Statistics (ONS) data shows that during April 2020 26,541 deaths occurred in Care homes, an increase of 17,850 on the five-year average.

This accounts for half the number of alleged "Covid" deaths during the same period.

Why were these people in care homes and not in hospital? They were in care homes because then Secretary of State for Health and Social Care Matt Hancock gave the order to put them there.

On the 19th March a directive was sent out to the NHS which required them to discharge all patients who they deemed did not require a hospital bed. NHS trusts were told that "they must adhere" to the new directive rapidly (within 2 hours of the decision being made).

This directive meant that thousands of people who required medical treatment and attention in hospital were discharged into care homes.

Midazolam is a benzodiazepine drug used for anaesthesia, procedural sedation, and to treat severe agitation. It is a drug used in palliative care for dying patients. In the US it is used as a sedative during executions by lethal injection.

Midazolam is also used before medical procedures and surgery to cause drowsiness, relieve anxiety, and erase any memory of the event.

It can cause serious or life-threatening breathing problems that may lead to permanent brain injury or death.

Midazolam should only be administered in a hospital or a doctors surgery that has the equipment needed to monitor the heart and lungs and to provide life-saving medical treatment quickly if breathing slows or stops.

Midazolam should be used with extreme caution in patients who have chronic renal failure, impaired hepatic function, or impaired cardiac function. It should also be used with extreme caution in obese and elderly patients.

The NHS bought two years' worth of Midazolam in March 2020 and wanted to purchase much more; supplies were even diverted from France.

Why would the NHS want to buy two years' worth of Midazolam, a drug associated with respiratory suppression and respiratory arrest, to treat a disease that allegedly causes respiratory suppression and respiratory arrest?

Using it to treat people who are suffering from pneumonia and respiratory insufficiency allegedly due to "Covid" could be lethal.

The NHS stated that Midazolam should be used for comfort at end-of-life care due to "Covid" to ease fear, anxiety, and agitation.

An NHS document states that Midazolam should be used for sedation prior to the patient requiring mechanical ventilation and states that dosage should be kept to a minimum and should be within the manufacturer's guidelines.

But a policy created for treating patients allegedly suffering anxiety due to "Covid", gives instructions to treat these patients with a starting dose of 2.5mg of Midazolam, or 1.25mg if the patient is "particularly frail", but to increase this to 5 – 10mg if the patient is "extremely distressed".

Even the starting dose is 0.25mg higher than the maximum recommended to administer to the elderly or unwell in sedation guidelines.

Matt Hancock ordered twice the amount of out of hospital prescribing of Midazolam in April 2020 compared to 2019.

In April 2019 up to 21,977 prescriptions for Midazolam were issued. However, in April 2020 45,033 prescriptions for Midazolam were issued which is a 104.91% increase.

But these weren't issued in hospitals, they were issued by GP practices which can only mean they were issued for end-of-life care.

In April 2020 there was a huge surge in Midazolam prescriptions out of hospital, concomitant with a huge surge in alleged "Covid" deaths. An identical pattern can be seen for January 2021. The excess deaths in the UK (during the alleged COVID-19 pandemic waves in early 2020 and early 2021) correlate almost perfectly with spikes in Midazolam 10mg/2ml use. This is not the anxiolytic oral form. It's a euthanasia injection.

Care home deaths were 205% up in April 2020 compared to April 2019. The vast majority of alleged "Covid" deaths were people over the age of 85.

There is a strong correlation between the over prescribing of Midazolam and the seemingly premature ending of life, with the deaths being put down as "Covid".

Three out of five alleged "Covid" deaths occurred in those who suffered learning difficulties and disabilities.

Those with learning difficulties and in care were much more likely to have a DNR (Do Not Resuscitate) order placed on them without the victim or their family being informed. Carers / NHS staff then used this as permission to put the victim on end-of-life care, which involves the use of Midazolam.

According to a Care Quality Commission (CQC) statement in August 2020:

"Providers should always work to prevent avoidable harm or death for all those they care for. Protocols, guidelines, and triage systems should be based on equality of access to care and treatment. If they are based on assumptions that some groups are less entitled to care and treatment than others, this would be discriminatory. It would also potentially breach human rights, including the right to life, even if there were concerns that hospital or critical care capacity may be reached."

The two-year supply of Midazolam seems to have been depleted by October 2020 according to NHS documents. Once these were replenished the stocks were again depleted by the beginning of February 2021.

The evidence suggests that in reality we were ordered to stay at home, not to protect the NHS, but to enable prematurely ending the lives of the elderly and vulnerable which was falsely attributed to "Covid".

With over 80% of all "Covid" deaths in 2020 taking place in long term care homes, without these deaths there would have been no "pandemic", no fear or panic, and perhaps no COVID-19 "vaccine" rollout.

British MP Andrew Bridgen recently wrote: "I have been supplied with lots of evidence from people who believe their relatives died due to the medical interventions brought in as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic".

Former Pfizer scientist Dr Mike Yeadon PhD believes over 100,000 people were killed by government protocols using Midazolam and Morphine.

The NHS has committed one of the greatest crimes against humanity in living memory cynically using fear, compliance, ignorance, and trust.

Many people clapped on command while NHS staff practiced their dance routines. Many people displayed pictures of rainbows to show their support. Those rainbows might as well be swastikas. If man of the people Gary Lineker wants to make some real comparisons to 1930s Germany, then he should be outraged by this.

"Midazolam Matt" Hancock, the former UK Health Secretary who oversaw the "pandemic" response, should be in prison as should everyone else complicit in these crimes against humanity.
