

D. BACHELOR LION TABLE

This slender, well-groomed lion bows down before a friend, assuming a welcoming, receptive position and wearing a face of pure contentment. Is he wooing a burly suitor or emerging dreamily from a rapturous encounter with a likeminded friend? There are a million fantasies in his telling trace of a grin, so make something up for yourself. In the meantime, this jungle Jim supports a versatile (you can see through it) glass table that's ideal for recreation or the placement of everyday items such as books you'll never read, TV remotes, class A narcotics and more. This obliging "is he or isn't he?" lion is made of an unregulated resin material that's toxic if eaten (tempting as that may be), and has been designed by a cynical Chinese woman who has known much sacrifice, loss and hardship in her life yet still somehow finds the strength to push on, day after endless day. The oval glass tabletop is made of glass, silly. Moderately easy to assemble, provided it hasn't been damaged beyond repair during its long journey to your home from the windowless, unsafe factory where it was made under appalling conditions. Those legs will snap right off if you're not careful.

40" x 1 x 24.5" x Y2 x 7.5%; glass table will not support human legs or feet and will shatter easily into dangerous shards almost immediately

Home things are the importantest of all

C. CELEBRATE FAMILY DINNERTIME

With today's busy lifestyles, getting the whole family together for dinner is often more difficult than preparing the meal itself! And when you finally do wrangle them all together, what you're serving hardly matters — it's more important that you're all there together and basking in the glow of each other's company. This fun and elegant reproduction is done in a 'classic' style and features a patient looking dad who's wondering if there will be any wine (or the liquid of your choice) left for him after his busy wife gets through pouring for a host of thirsty wonderful brothers, uncles and cousins. You know the scene all too well! They're seated in their humble dining room and enjoying a royal feast of comfort food items such as figs, salted meat, buttered toast, imitation crab, lamb's knuckles, teriyaki kale salad, Hot Pockets®, Welsh rabbit, and mayo-infused sweet potato cupcakes. For best results, place it where people can see it. Over two feet wide, how many times do we have to tell you?
