Frequently Asked Questions

- What does Barkley's Hope do with my intake information? The interview intake application goes to the case manager who will be collaborating with the client on their recovery. Barkley's Hope respects the anonymity of individuals and the struggles of being in recovery, the only information shared inter agency from us would pertain to the owner's identification and the animal at issue. In Colorado pets are considered property so that's the only information we can exchange, nothing regarding the individual's recovery.
- Is there a waiting list? Yes, it's about 2 weeks, it usually takes some time to line up a foster, get vaccinations done and paperwork completed but there are options available if an eminent crisis is happening.
- What is the average cost of boarding a pet? It depends on the size, type and breed and the specific need of the animal, but the average cost is between $500 and $750 up to $1500 a month. This is generously funded by United Way and Roice Hurst. Those individuals who complete the agreement are not billed for anything including vaccinations and vet care if needed.
- What happens if I default on my agreement? The animal will be rehomed. Barkley's Hope, Roice Hurst and its fosters will always be advocates for the animal and act in the animal's best interest. We would be under no obligation to put an animal at risk by returning to a bad situation.
- Can I visit my pet during my treatment program? As a rule, no because of liability issues and the resources needed to facilitate such requests.
- Can I leave my treatment for a medical or family emergency and restart the program later? As a rule, no because of liability issues and the resources needed to facilitate such requests. If you leave treatment against the advice of the facility, your sponsor or case manager, you have breached the agreement.
- What if I'm doing an outpatient recovery program? The extended crisis boarding program through Barkley's Hope is ONLY available to individuals who are in or entering an accredited inpatient program.
