Something New!

Yes indeed, we are trying something new here at Central Coast Writers to better communicate with you, our valued members. We plan to send an email News Blast just like this one twice a month, around the first and the 15th. Our objective: to keep you updated on our activities to help you achieve your writing goals.

I know all of you are undoubtedly suffering from email overload, your In boxes overflowing with newsletters just like this one. The fact that you've opened it is encouraging. Our hope is that the content will be short and concise, so that you can give it a glance and make note of the items important to you before deleting it.

BTW, to make sure the newsletter lands in your In box and not your Promotions folder or spam, please add info@centralcoastwriters to your email address book. This will greatly enhance the chances of the News Blast actually reaching you.

Sat Chat is Back, Jack

Join us this Saturday (June 28th, from 10:30-noonish) at the Seaside Library where we'll discuss all things writer-related (or whatever everyone feels like yakking about).

Be there, aloha!

Public Speaking for Authors

Join us for another great Writers Round Up. This one's an encore presentation by our own Christine Sleeter, who will show us how to unlock the key when it comes to public speaking--writer style.

Since it's happening on the same day as Sat Chat, we'll wrap Sat Chat up early so you can double down on your CCW fix.

Christine will be speaking at The Little House in Jewell Park, right across from the P.G. Library. This don't-miss event runs from 1-2:30pm

Our July Speaker

Sam Stern: "The AI Era: Hope, Hype, and Innovation for Writers and Creatives"

Tuesday, July 15 5:30 p.m.

Center for Spiritual Awareness

522 Central Ave., Pacific Grove

Free admission + free pizza!

When: Saturday, August 2nd from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Why: Why not?

Note: You don't have to have books to sell. Feel free to just represent the mighty CCW. If interested, email Scotty at scotty@scottycornfield.com
