

CHARLIE CURTIS LANGAGER

Charlie “Chuck” Curtis Langager, 66, of Callahan, passed away May 13, 2024, with his loving family by his side. He was born August 2, 1957 in Jacksonville. Chuck loved music. If you ever had the pleasure of hearing him play guitar, his mastery of melody was very apparent. Chuck had a special affinity for the blues. Not only did he play but he also wrote songs and poetry. Chuck’s art was not limited to music.

He was also a master carpenter for the Las Vegas Carpenters Union. His woodworking skills are all over the Las Vegas valley. Chuck’s work can be seen in many of the beautiful stages, penthouses, shops and homes there, as well as the Jacksonville area where he spent the remainder of his years. He also enjoyed the outdoors. Chuck was never much of a “people person.” He enjoyed the quiet solitude of nature. Those few people who he called friend, can say that Chuck’s heart and soul were kind and gentle. He goes on now to play his music for the angels, but his memory will live on through his art. Chuck is preceded in death by his mother Phyllis Frehner; father Charlie Curtis Holmes; and sister Ronda DeVisser.

Chuck leaves behind his son Gregory Langager; daughters Ariel Dampier and Bronte MacFawn; siblings Phil Langager, Sam Holmes and Tisha Pearson; granddaughters Emmalei Norton, Ellaina Dampier, Zella MacFawn and Eloise MacFawn; grandsons Gabriel Bell, Maxx MacFawn and soon to be grandson Danon Dampier; and lifelong friend Dee Riley.
