

Florida State Beekeepers Association 2025 Conference

Why Support the Florida State Beekeepers Association?

By sponsoring our conference, you support Florida's agriculture and ecosystem by providing beekeepers with the latest knowledge and resources to maintain healthy bee populations.

The Florida State Beekeepers Association (FSBA), founded in the early 20th century, is a non-profit for hobbyist and commercial beekeepers. It offers a network for sharing best practices, advocates for beekeepers, supports research and provides educational resources. FSBA promotes sustainable practices to benefit Florida's agriculture and biodiversity.

The Florida State Beekeepers Association (FSBA) has a rich history of achievements.

Key Milestones and Events

- Inception & Early History: Founded in the early 1900s, the Florida State Beekeepers Association (FSBA) quickly became a key resource for new and experienced beekeepers, facilitating knowledge sharing and collaboration across Florida.
- University of Florida Bee Lab: One of FSBA's significant contributions to apiculture research is its financial support for establishing the University of Florida Bee Lab. This institution has been instrumental in advancing beekeeping practices and research within the state.
- Legislative Successes: The FSBA effectively lobbied for the rights of Florida's beekeepers, playing a vital role in developing the Florida Cottage Food Law. This law allows beekeepers to sell honey from their homes without needing a food permit, simplifying participation in the local economy.
- Hurricane Relief Efforts: Given Florida's vulnerability to hurricanes, the FSBA has been crucial in coordinating aid and support for beekeepers impacted by natural disasters.
- Ongoing Research & Education: The association supports ongoing research and educational initiatives. They ensure that beekeepers can access the latest information and best practices by hosting workshops, conferences, and seminars to disseminate essential knowledge.

Thank you for supporting the Florida State Beekeepers Association's efforts to promote sustainable beekeeping practices and protect essential pollinators through vital education and awareness programs.
