HAPPY WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH!

BY ABBEY RINDLISBACHER

As we near the end of Women's History Month, we want to take a moment to honor the women who have made history and continue to make strides in various fields today. This month, we've celebrated the contributions of women throughout history, from political leaders to artists, scientists, and entrepreneurs who have shaped our world and paved the way for future generations.

In recognition of Women's History Month, we'd like to share a fun fact about a remarkable woman who played a significant role in the founding of the world's oldest university. Did you know that the University of Bologna, founded in 1088, was the first university in the world and was founded by a woman? Her name was Fatima al-Fihri, and she was a Muslim woman from Tunisia who used her inheritance to establish the university, which became a center of learning and innovation in Europe during the Middle Ages. Fatima al-Fihri's legacy is a testament to the power of women's leadership and their ability to create lasting change in the world.

As we celebrate Women's History Month, let's continue to honor the achievements of women throughout history and work towards a more equitable and inclusive future for all.
