
He Paid the Check.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 30.—Abraham Breakstone is Luzerne borough's leading merchant. He is young, handsome, wealthy, but very bashful. Some months ago he entered into negotiations with Max Levy to procure him a wife. One of the conditions was that the girl must have $1,000. Levy, after looking around awhile, succeeded in getting a nice young lady for Breakstone. Her name was Miss Harris. They were married and Levy received a check for $50 for his labor, payable in thirty days. After Breakstone had been married a short time he found that his wife was not worth $1,000. He therefore stopped payment on the check, which, by this time, had fallen into the hands of Frank Yonhash. The latter brought suit against Breakstone for the amount, and rather than go to court, Breakstone paid the check yesterday.
