

CARLOS (CONT'D)

I already know the routine. You're concerned about my eternal soul, right?

NATHAN

Yes sir.

CARLOS

Want to know where I'll spend eternity?

NATHAN

That's right.

CARLOS

So if I told you that I don't believe anything you're offering, will you keep walking so we can get back to our game?

NATHAN

You forgot the most important question, sir. Do you know Jesus as your personal savior?

CARLOS

Why would I want a fictional character to do anything for me that I can't already do for myself?

NATHAN

Jesus is real, sir. Very real. It is a historical fact that he existed.

CARLOS

Oh, I agree he existed and that there was a man called Jesus of Nazareth. And yes, he died. What is fiction is that he died for my sins and that his death saved me when it couldn't even save him. What is fiction is that you believe they buried him and that he rose from the grave.

NATHAN

The historical account of his death and resurrection are fact sir, witnessed by over 500 people.

500 hundred deranged followers
that suffered from a mass deception.

NATHAN
Witnesses that saw him, talked to him, and saw him leave.

CARLOS
Self-deceived believers clinging to their hopes in a dead leader.

NATHAN
A leader that will soon return to take with him those that faithfully believed in His resurrection, both living and dead!

Carlos moves to within a few inches of the Nathan's face.

Deceived believers that hope in a dead man and a return that they will go to their graves hoping for but never receiving.

NATHAN
Prophecy has been proven . . .

CARLOS
Enough. Leave. And I suggest you get a better sales pitch. That one is no longer believed in, even by the followers.

NATHAN
Thank you for your time sir. I'll be praying for you.

I stopped believing in fairy tales a long time ago. Pray for your own enlightenment son.

Nathan turns and walks away.

Justin stands eyes intently focused on Carlos.
