

Our practice is all about yours

We focus on Texas health law

About Us

We get it. Unraveling the tangled web of business and health care law isn't part of your job description. But it's what we do every day. At Reed Claymon, we are focused on protecting your legal interests, so you can keep doing what you do best: serving patients and running your organization.

Based in Austin, Texas, several attorneys with Reed Claymon are recognized in U.S. News and World Report and Best Lawyers for health care law. Our clients come to us because we offer decades of experience and a track record of success representing hospitals, physicians, health care entities and other businesses. They stay with us because of our personal approach, competitive rates and commitment to serving the greater good.

Let us show you how the right legal advice can not only safeguard your organization, but help you deliver a higher standard of care for the people you serve.

Practice Areas

HEALTH LAW

Perhaps more than any other industry, the field of health care law is a complex and ever-shifting landscape of statutes and regulations. And for good reason. People's lives are at stake. But even an organization with an unblemished record can find itself troubled by legal issues – bogged down by administrative red tape.
