Tassie Mums pop-up at Spring Farm Village

We were delighted to be part of the Spring Farm Village Community Day in Kingston and had an absolute ball! It was wonderful to meet so many members of our local community and share all things Tassie Mums.

A huge thank you to everyone who stopped by our stall, made a purchase or two to help support our work. The encouragement and generosity we received throughout the day was truly heartwarming.

Recently, Interim Commissioner for Children and Young People Ros Cornish AM visited Tassie Mums to learn more about the work that we do in the community.

"I was blown away by the commitment and dedication of everyone involved. Their neatly organised facility was bursting at the seams with donated goods, and while we were speaking, a steady stream of social service agencies arrived to collect items for distribution to the community."

Ros also followed up her visit by featuring Tassie Mums in a Mercury opinion piece titled We Must Invest in and Involve Youth. In the article, she highlighted the significant role Tassie Mums plays in supporting vulnerable children, writing:

"A striking fact about this community-sourced support is that close to 40 per cent of the goods dispersed by this charity are distributed through government agencies to children in the care of the state. This level of support highlights the scale of unmet need and the precarious limits of relying on volunteers alone."

We'd like to thank Ros for taking the time to visit Tassie Mums and for her ongoing interest in the wellbeing of Tasmanian children and young people
