

Manshoor's office Layout and Design

Meeting room and common working space

Meeting room and common working space

The core of the office includes the meeting room/ common working area and a chilling space for the team to share and exchange ideas. Placing both areas to face the blackboard wall.

Chilling area and lockers

At the back of the chilling area there is a shelving system that works as lockers for the team to use. Having the personal storage area in the common space encourages fluidity of space and indicates that the team can work in any space within the office.

Quite room

The room has a multi-functional layout where it could be used as a space to receive guests or it could be used as an office for team members who need to work in a quite environment.

Studio workspace

The studio room has a cross-functional desk where the whole team would sit together which can enhance the work flow and creativity. The room includes a black board for the studio other than the main board in the common area.

Managment office

The management office includes a separate storage area for logistic purposes. The room has a single table for the managerial team to use as a desk or a small meeting table.

Based on the initial meeting with Manshoor and the space study, This design aimed to reflect the needs and potentials of Manshoor's team. The space creates connections between the team while allowing quite and separate moments for individuals to focus and relax. Modern journalism is bold, adaptive and to the point. This is what this design strives to be.
