Tallahassee Tornadoes

News and Updates

Tornadoes Wreck Tallahassee

On Friday, May 10th, in the early morning hours three tornadoes with winds of 110-115 mph tore through the urban core of Tallahassee creating a miles long path of destruction. Many say it is the worst damage to the Capital City since Hurricane Kate in 1985. Families continue to be without power one week later. Many are staying in shelters, in temporary housing or with friends and family members. One life was lost during the storm as a tree fell through a mobile home. Initial estimates show at least 182 homes as receiving major damage or destroyed and the number is growing.

As residents recover from the storm, we are in need of assistance with debris removal, tarping, cleanout and assessments. A base camp to receive volunteer teams has been set up at Tallahassee Heights Methodist Church.
