The Propaganda of Racism

By Connie M. Morris, M.S.
©2025, 204 pages
ISBN: 979-8-8233-2611-7

In this book, Morris unpacks the powerful forces shaping society's beliefs about race. This work examines racism as a social construct—a concept society has created rather than one based on biological fact—and reveals its pervasive influence across domains like education, politics, religion, and media. Through vivid examples, Morris highlights how propaganda—deliberately biased information designed to sway public opinion—reinforces these racial constructs, upholding systemic inequalities.

Rethinking Implicit Bias Training

By Connie M. Morris, M.S.
©2024, 314 pages
ISBN: 979-8-8233-0013-1

This book critically examines the concept of implicit bias, particularly within the context of police training and the broader societal implications of racism. It guides readers through the intricate world of criminal justice, highlighting contemporary issues critical to cultivating justice and empathy within the profession.

"In today's world, we more than filtered lessons and headlines shaped by politics," said Morris. "We need the courage to confront injustice, the clarity to recognize embedded bias, and the tools to dismantle systems. My books don't just raise awareness. They expose the design of inequality and help individuals challenge it at its roots."

— Connie Morris
