Consent for Treatment

Applied Behavior Analysis is the scientific approach of systematically applying the principles of behavior to improve or change socially significant behavior. Experimentation, called functional analysis, is employed to identify the social and environmental variables influencing or maintaining these behaviors. Behavior Analysts seek to identify and change environmental factors leading to these problematic behaviors and develop positive replacements. Behavior Analysts utilize the input of family and other supports to discover what is maintaining a specified behavior, discover more appropriate replacement behaviors, and set up a plan to teach them. Behavior Analysts treat the individual directly and at other times may train significant others (i.e. teachers, family members, other supports, etc.).

By signing this form, I am willingly consenting to Applied Behavior Analysis services for _____ . I understand that a behavior assessment report will be completed by the Behavior Analyst, and if recommended, a behavior support plan will be developed and implemented. I understand that adhering to this plan is voluntary and the interventions included are designed to provide positive alternatives to changing the problem behavior. If any changes occur in the plan, the legally competent individual, guardian, or legal conservator will be informed and will have complete knowledge of any and all changes. I also give my expressed consent to release the individual's information, as it relates to these services, to any other applicable professional involved in the implementation of these services.
