

Freedom: Dan Coyle

Freedom comes every day, we go through life experiencing lots of different difficulties, we go to school from an early age cooped up in a classroom with 30 other kids. You can't wait for playtime just to spread your wings a little, then home time the same again. You leave, start work, spend your days earning your money to afford a holiday for 2 weeks of freedom. You marry, have kids who have kids and then you retire. The thing is you now have grandkids. You think you would be tied down but you learn what freedom really is. The best feeling is watching the grandkids enjoying their childhood without shackles. You don't realise that was you; 64 years of freedom is making those memories and reliving them through your grandkids.
