If you feel this contract is unfair because the puppies were not properly identified, you can contact us at: and we will explain our thoughts on the matter. Why does the Puppy Deposit Contract exist? A very common question, given the "puppy mills" that are proliferating on our shores, is "Why should anyone sign a puppy contract?" It would seem that there is no reason to sign a puppy contract, as dogs are not the type of animals that would have been bred for sale in a puppy/foster program years ago. For these reasons, we have chosen not to.

In the event of the puppy's death, Buyer must provide Seller with results from an autopsy conducted by a licensed veterinarian. Buver may choose another puppy of equal purchase price when availability allows. Seller will pay shipping costs for the second

The Puppy Deposit Contract has become an important legal instrument that protects our sellers. It states the breed quality of our dogs and clearly states that we are not breeding for sale or sale for any breeder. It states very clearly that any breeder with more than 15 dogs in stock will be required to conduct further breeding tests on these dogs for the rest of their life, under penalty of bankruptcy. Who should complete Puppy Deposit Contract? The Puppy Deposit contract is a great way to help a puppy get settled. This contract should be done for the first few days with the dog's guardian. If you're a friend, you can go to a veterinary clinic as often as needed. Please note that if the owner is a person who receives regular visits from their dog, such as a babysitter, and then comes to work, the contract should be done for the entire period of time (the puppy's first two weeks at the new home). Why should I complete the Puppy Deposit Contract and get a puppy: The puppy has health insurance. The puppy has a deposit into a new home. After the puppy leaves your home, you want the puppy to get a new home somewhere that has a good reputation. Therefore, having insurance on the puppy may encourage you to take the puppy with you and place him/her in a new home. In some cases, you may be looking for a new home and the puppy may be the perfect dog for you. When the puppy is placed into the contract, or the contract is completed, it is a legal matter. Depending on the dog's life, which is around a week after the puppy's birth. If the owner finds out after the puppy has left the home that medical insurance doesn't cover the puppy's medical expenses up to the date of the puppy will go into training. If you are planning a trip to visit the dog when training begins, it is advisable that the puppy be in the contract as a deposit. If you get a puppy and then decide you want the dog back, then you can ask your old puppy deposit holder to provide a new puppy deposit agreement. Keep an eye on the new puppy and complete the contract again.

Along with that joy, though, comes the learning process of how to purchase a guality pup. Legitimate breeders with a fantastic reputation might have a few more extensive hoops to jump through, but the product is much more rewarding. After all, with good breeders comes the assurance that your puppy is healthy, loved, and well-socialized. If you have ever heard of the puppy contract, you might wonder what it's all about. Or, if you're a breeder, you might want to consider deposit contracts when you place your puppies in the long run. The Importance of Using a Contract for a Deposit on a Puppy Putting a deposit down on a puppy has benefits for both the buyer and the seller. Even though it might seem like a lot to dish out at once without genuinely knowing the pupy is well cared for. Signing a Contract If you are putting down a large chunk of money on a puppy that you may or may not have met, it might seem a little scary. After all, how do you know you're compatible with a puppy, and is the deposit away to scam you out of your hard-earned cash? This practice is actually widespread to protect the buyer and the breeder and secure the puppies, many breeders will work with you so that you can view them beforehand. Image Credit: LightField Studios, Shutterstock Offering the Contract There's no denying that breeders adore their puppies. The love of the particular breed is likely the main reason why people get into the business in the first place. The last thing that a breeder wants is one of their beloved puppies to enter a home where they're not wanted, as they know the dangers of shelters and continuous rehoming. A deposit contract verify that the buyer is serious, so you don't have to worry about backing out or falling through. What Questions Should You Ask Before Committing to a Deposit? To protect your purchase and ensure you were getting a quality puppy, you were going to have plenty of questions of your own. Some really great ones to start with are: What are the parent's temperaments like? Knowing each of the parent's temperaments like? existing behavioral problems or certain tendencies, you can know that ahead of time. Have the puppies had any previous vetting or shots? Most reputable breeders make sure to have all of the puppy's vet checked with their first round of shots before they go to their new homes. You need to know if this has already happened before when you take your dog to the vet for the first time. How large will go und go individual pup. Are there any known health issues in the bloodline? Health issues in the bloodline? Health issues in the bloodline? Transitioning food is important, especially when it comes to a puppy's sensitive gut. If you plan on changing their food, it's essential to know what food they are currently on so that you can begin the process slowly. Or, you can always keep them on the same food throughout their puppy years. puppy will be born, the price of the puppy (the price for a puppy which has an agreement over a specific month), and when the puppy will be returned if the agreement is not fulfilled. Puppy sales are usually advertised as an "open" transaction, meaning that the puppy owner is expected to pay the deposit, unless the puppy is returned within the agreed upon period. There are many other variables which influence the price, so it is difficult to determine how much the puppy's "price" of the dog may be in a puppy sale contract. Generally speaking, a high-end "house" pet is about twice as much as other breeds, which can cost 500 or more. However, sometimes a puppy is priced to sell with some additional equipment (such as a collar, leash, or a leash with a kennel) in order to get a high price. Sometimes dog sellers advertise a discount for large deposit, It would seem that the deposit price is set as a function of the puppy's breed, but a discount can be given if you deposit a puppy before its sale date. Many dog sellers require a deposit of at least 300. A 300 deposit is usually necessary when you are buying a puppy from a breeder, as this is the starting price of this type of dog, but can be as low as 100 for a puppy which is not advertised as a "breed". Some dog sellers can take a 300 deposit, but the buyer has to pay it off before having a puppy. In general, it is not recommended paying a deposit

It is illegal for any new pet owner to turn around and sell the same pet to a new owner. What are the different types of Puppy Deposit Contract? It depends on where you live. However, the following are commonly accepted terms: A Puppy Deposit Contract? It depends on where you live.

If you choose to keep your puppy home you will be held for a mandatory 6-week period of time followed by a rehoming hearing. Your new pet can be placed with another owner and rehomed if suitable. You must meet your new puppy's new household before this can be done. If we can't place the puppy with me or for any other reason we may rehome the puppy so the nearest suitable foster home, rescue or person. It is important to note that any new pet given to us will be given as a permanent residence.

When you bring your puppy home you'll be given a signed copy of the Puppy Deposit Contract and you will need to sign it. You then have a 5-minute time to decide if you want to take the puppy home.

to the rescue's shelter in question. If you prefer, you may provide the original copy, which will be reviewed and corrected prior to placement. As much as possible, you would like the dog to get plenty of exercise, attention, socialization, and veterinary attention while in your care. • For dogs that are placed in the above programs and are subsequently adopted out, we recommend that a minimum of 50% of the costs to the rescue be covered by your donation. please note that we can only accept cash and check payments through our PayPal account. For dogs not placed into a foster program but need temporary foster care, a donation through an approved veterinarian will be required to provide temporary foster care during the placement. What if the dog is not adopted, and I don't want it? There are some situations where you may be willing to return the dog if the adopter or rescuers accept the dog. How do I get my Puppy Deposit Contract? Simply print your contract out and take it to your nearest vet to have your dog fully vaccinated. Once your puppy is over 8 weeks of age and ready to go to its new home, the vet will take your puppy. Make sure to read the full terms, or choose a shorter version: If my dog must be vaccinated for any reason, what should I get it tested for? Many breeders offer vaccinations for their puppies for free or discounted, or for the cost of the vaccine. If you have any questions you can always ask the vet that your puppy please see what your puppy is getting vaccinated for. The veterinary staff usually know what the puppies' health status is, or can do an online test with pictures and a simple questionnaire to help determine what needs to be done when getting a puppy vaccinated. Many of these vaccinations are mandatory in their country (USA, Canada) and not compulsory in another country. cared for, taken on walks, and socialized with dogs/cats! You don't have to give this extra care, but it is very important. You must be sure that you provide a good home for your puppy. Furthermore, you need to spend a few minutes a day to socialize your puppy from as young as he can be to as old as he can be. If, for example you have a puppy that is just under 3 months old, you can simply pick him up and put him down. The next day have him play with the other puppies and take them for a stroll. After a couple of hours give him a bath and brush his coat. If there is an older puppy, he should be given some time to bond with you before going into the home with a litter. What is an appropriate puppy age to get? Most reputable breeders do not recommend breeding for a puppy that is over 6 weeks of age, even after being bred for at least a year. Some breeders will breed a puppy that is over 6 weeks of age, but will give a breeder credit if your puppy is not a year or more old when being bred. If you're going to breed a puppy from a puppy mill in China, or even a puppy from a shelter to a breeder there who may not have had much experience with breeding or socializing puppies, this can make sense. What documents do I need to attach to my Puppy Deposit Contract? The documents you will need for your contract, including copies of the original agreement, a declaration and a certificate of signature are: Your name Your signature or signature of signature as attested by a notary public A photocopy of the certificate of signature card stating that you are the real owner of the dog(s) Your full name The address where you are staying (including the street name) If you are bringing your dog to the hospital it is also advisable that you have documents from both you and your new puppy's previous owners. How do I sign the contract? You can send a certificate of a seizure), a copy of the puppy's certificate of birth or medical certificate to the puppy rescue, or simply write your signatures on the back of the contract What happens in the hospital?

Dog deposit contracts are a good deal for both purchasers and sellers. What happens after I buy your puppy, we'll send you information and photos to help you look forward to spending some quality time with your new best friend. (Please note: you cannot get a puppy if you can't afford to look forward to it.) If the puppy is a Collie, you will not be refunded until you contact the breeder. What should I do if I need to place a dog into a rescue? While we highly recommend that you consider placing a puppy into a rescue, you are not required to. As a donor you may decide not to place a dog into specific rescues as you feel it's better to be able to help more dogs who may be in need. Any dogs you will place and keep in your care may only go into the following rescues: the Canine Companions for Independence Rescue the Animal Foundation of the Maritime Rescue A Dog and Cat Rescue Program in your area You have the option of contacting the respective rescues for a puppy placement appointment. If you are placing a dog in your home and decide to place the puppy with one of the above programs (or perhaps not), please consider sending two copies of the contract, which should be done upon acceptance. It is important that the contract be signed personally by you AND the dog's owner (not an intermediary such as a vet). It is also important to send any additional information such as a description of your dog, background, etc.

We can discuss the specifics at the time the puppy is placed in your home. What Is a Puppy deposit Contract?
