Resources to think about:

*Was your loved one enlisted at any point in their life, if so they may qualify for veterans support.

*Was your loved one apart of a church community of any type? Typically churches and religious organizations will help with donations, even if your loved one wasn't a current member.

*Local news stations are always worth reaching out to as they have extensive reach to the community through social media & beyond.

For child loss specific programs (In addition to resources above):

The TEARS Foundation- thetearsfoundation.org

Kadens Cause- <https://www.kadenscause.org/>

(Will donate to your bill at funeral home, care packages to parents, headstones)

In addition to the organizations listed here, Your Journey Home offers an optional support service for families who need help navigating funding, donations, and community resources for burial and funeral costs.

For a flat fee of $125, I can assist with:

Identifying which programs you may qualify for, Helping you complete applications for financial assistance, Reaching out to local nonprofits, churches, and community partners, Coordinating donation requests when appropriate, Guiding you through the next steps so you don't feel alone in the process.

Please note: Funding is never guaranteed, and available support varies based on timing, demand, and each organization's criteria. My role is to help you access and apply for what exists not to promise outcomes. Over the years, I've developed strong working relationships with many of the organizations on this list. While I never expect special treatment, this familiarity often helps families move through the process more smoothly. My intention is simply to offer support, guidance, and a steadier path during a very difficult time.
