3 Visions Farm will serve in more ways than one....

To those unfamiliar with eco-tourism, this is land set aside to be traversed and appreciated with little impact to the surroundings. The overall draw of such tourism is the ability to witness the ecosystem at its natural state which tends to draw the eye of hikers, naturalists and curious minds. As an added bonus, eco-tourism has been used to save endangered areas where development threatens to uproot it simply by drawing enough eyes to be aware. The familiarity to the history and beauty of it all fosters a connection that in turn hopefully inspires others throughout their experience.

3 Visions Farm seeks to follow suit using the on site yurts and tents made by hand and outdoor dining. Part of the donations received will go towards offsetting costs for compost toilets in the camps that will reduce water usage and create natural fertilizer. The food that will be served will be using

"farm to table" so that customers will be eating what comes straight out of our gardens. Another step into the future after crops have been divided will feature "pick your own produce". Think of this as going strawberry picking only for more than a box of berries! The rest of the acreage is intended for living spaces, perhaps even a plot for a new school so that 3 Visions Farm becomes a sufficient community that thrives through education about the very things it features. Through all these ways we will utilize what's been given straight back into the hands that built it without heavy negative impact.

Stay tuned for more updates and information! Thank you for all that you do.
