Homeowners Champion: Meet the Team

Stuart Yasgur
Principal, Founder and Board Member
Economic Architecture

Stuart Yasgur brings 15 years of experience in advancing innovations that use market forces to address social challenges at large scale. As the founder and principal of Economic Architecture, Stuart leads a team of researchers and storytellers to foster, design, and build a wider public understanding of structural innovations. Projects such as the Valuing Homes in Black Communities Challenge, created by Stuart with Dr. Andre Perry, a Senior Fellow at the Brookings Institution, and Project H2O, a new mortgage liquidity product, seek to (re)design our markets to serve the public good and allow more people to participate fully in our markets.

Previously, as a Global Leadership Group Member at Ashoka, Stuart initiated efforts that directed more than $500 million to innovative market-based solutions, engaged with the G20 through the Toronto, Seoul, and Los Cabos Summits. Stuart has taught at New York University and the London School of Economics, received a PhD from the London School of Economics, a master's degree from Columbia University, and a bachelor's degree from Cornell University.

Aditi Advani Ramirez
Principal
Economic Architecture

Aditi Advani Ramirez has spent the last 15 years working at the intersection of financial services and economic development. She started her career in investment banking at JPMorgan Chase and GE Merchant Banking.

Following business school, Aditi spent nearly a decade investing in North American Infrastructure, where she was the Founder and COO of Macquarie Partnership for Social Impact, an institutionally backed impact investing fund.

Since 2014 Aditi has been a consultant for businesses whose core mission have a positive social and/or environmental impact. Aditi has a master’s degree from the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and a bachelor’s degree from the College of William & Mary.

Ken Bulow
Project Consultant
Economic Architecture

After a long career working with healthcare providers for 30 years, Ken has transitioned into operational and advisory roles for organizations focused on improving housing outcomes for all Americans.

Ken spent the first half of his career working for big-5 consulting firms serving very large health systems on multi-disciplinary projects as an individual contributor in the early days and as a project leader as his career progressed. After leaving consulting Ken worked for and owned several firms (both public and private) responsible for handling patient financial services serving US healthcare providers.

Ken has successfully led small and large teams, both domestically and internationally to deliver meaningful results for his customers. Since retirement from full-time employment, Ken has been consulting as well as volunteering with a number of non-profit organizations.
